17 WARD CHIEFS BACK PINCHOT

Today

Wall and Broad Still There.
Panic, Foolish Word.
Stalin's Stake.
The Busy Rum Demon.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

THE WORLD didn't come to an end yesterday, after all.

When 3 o'clock struck, Broad and Wall streets were still joined together at the corner where the Stock Exchange looks on Morgan & Co. and they both look on the Sub-Treasury.

STEEL DECIDED to go up instead of down, and incidentally, those that sell good American stocks short now will eventually wish that a millstone had been tied about their necks and they thrown into the depths of the sea.

THE WORD "PANIC," one of the most disagreeable in the language, sending a chill to the soul of gamblers and sound businessmen alike, is, as panics themselves usually are, based on meaningless fear.

The god Pan, with shoulders and arms of a man, legs of a goat, was heard howling in the woods, causing among the people Panic fear, hence our word panic.

What they really heard was the wind howling in caves or woods. There wasn't any Pan.

THERE ISN'T any Pan now in the United States, with its wealth and gigantic resources of gold and other money unimpaired.

But the bears do the howling, and fear does the rest.

WE NEED the angel, minutely described by Mohammed, who saw the angel in the seventh heaven, on that famous midnight trip.

According to Mohammed, the angel had 70,000 heads, each with 70,000 mouths, each mouth had 70,000 tongues, each tongue spoke 70,000 different languages, and all were incessantly employed chanting the praises of the most high.

BUT EVEN that angel, however, with his 70,000 times 70,000 tongues, multiplied by 70,000 languages, wouldn't be able to comfort some of the frightened pessimists.

MR. GILBERT, careful observer in Washington, says Stalin, Russia's ruler, has "staked everything on the five-year plan." If the five-year period ends with Russia not changed from a medieval agricultural to a modern industrial state, Stalin will fall and Russia will have another revolution.

TO MAKE ACCURATE predictions about Russia is hard and the five-year plan will not fail sufficiently to cause Stalin's fall.

Peter the Great changed Russia from an Oriental to an Occidental country in a few years. Stalin might make as great a change in another direction.

In any case, Stalin, holding power, knows how to keep it, by shooting or exiling opponents. He's a man of action. Anybody that wants his job will have to take it from him.

THE REV. DR. Stanley High, editor of the Christian Herald, says wet Republicans are conspiring against President Hoover. The nomination of wet Mr. Tuttle for governor of New York is part of a plot to get rid of Mr. Hoover in 1932, and put Dwight W. Morrow, also wet, in his place.

IT IS AN interesting vision of wickedness. But, Dwight W. Morrow doesn't believe it, Mr. Tuttle doesn't believe it, President Hoover doesn't believe it, and the convention of 1932 will renominate Mr. Hoover.

Otherwise it is a good vision.

THE CANDIDATES for governor of New York, Roosevelt, Democratic, Tuttle, Republican, are cheered by heavy registration. Apparently the state is taking an interest in its government this time.

Because of sudden change in the public mind, both Republican and Democratic candidates are running as "wringing wets."

The vote of the independent bone-dry candidate will shed light on the status of prohibition in the richest, biggest city and most prosperous state of the Union.

THE DEMON RUM continues to demonstrate increased efficiency in our bootleg era. It was bad enough in old days, when varnish and wood extract were not used to make whisky. Whisky killed you rather slowly.

At present, the process may take anywhere from five minutes to five years.

IN NEWARK, N. J., yesterday, for instance, four people died promptly after drinking bootleg. The "authorities fear that more deaths may follow, as that particular whisky seems to be widely distributed."

It is amazing that adults, not hopeless alcoholics, should drink poisonous concoctions of which they know nothing.

SCOTLAND HAS gangs and gang wars, according to Glasgow reports.

Religious bias, lack of employment, lack of control by parents, AND GIRLS are the main causes of Scotch gang warfare.

Whisky, bootleg or otherwise, racketeering, have nothing to do with it.

PROTESTANT - CATHOLIC rivalry in football is one trouble, and Scotch girls, "uncertain, coy and hard to please," another. When a girl leaves one gang for another the two gangs fight. The gangsters are very young, many have never worked in their lives, employment being slack. Fighting provides an outlet for their energies.

CARNEGIE, TORNADO BATTLE

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

From out of the South today a Golden Tornado will sweep across the Stadium greensward to do battle with Carnegie Tech's powerful eleven in the first major college football game of the year in Pittsburgh.

The Tornado is yclept Georgia Tech.

A veritable battle of technicians this is to be, and the local engineers will go into the fray the favorites to win for two reasons. One is that they have shown amazing strength in the first two games, in which they have romped to one-sided victories over Buffalo and Thiel. The other is that they will be playing at home with their entire reserve strength available.

TORNADO WORKS OUT

Georgia Tech's hosts invaded the city yesterday for the first time since their memorable trio of battles with Pitt at Forbes Field a decade ago, all of which the Panthers won. Following a workout at the Stadium, they returned to their headquarters at the Fairfax Hotel to await the call to return to the gridiron for the whistle today.

A crowd of some 30,000 is expected to witness the battle, including some 3,000 members of the Westinghouse Clerks' Asso-

Vote Machine Suit Motive Questioned

That the taxpayers' suit brought against the County Commissioners in the awarding of the vote machine contract was not filed to protect taxpayers' rights, but to advance the interests of the Automatic Voting Machine Company, of Jamestown, was alleged in an answer filed in Common Pleas Court today by the Poole Engineering and Machine Company.

In the answer the company denies all charges made by Francis S. Guthrie in his taxpayers' bill against county officials, and declares that the bid of the Poole company saved the county $35,000, while the Jamestown company did not qualify as a bidder because it refused to file with the County Commissioners a list of stockholders and directors.

American Writer, Ill, Suicide in Paris

PARIS, Oct. 11.—(AP.)—The American consulate was informed that Mrs. Ethelyn Leslie Huston, of Hollywood, Cal., a journalist, had committed suicide in her hotel here Thursday.

Mrs. Huston, who was 61, shot herself in the head. She left a note to the consulate explaining that her action was caused by ill health.

Burleigh Grimes' Wife Sues for Divorce

CANTON, O., Oct. 11.—(INS.)—The marital life of Burleigh Grimes, St. Louis Cardinal pitching ace, went "phfft" again today when his wife, Mrs. Florence Ruth Grimes, filed suit for divorce in Common Pleas Court here.

Mrs. Grimes, who only last April fought a divorce action instigated by the baseball star, charged her husband with gossiping to people in their home town (Minerva) to humiliate her and to make himself popular; with causing her mental anguish by his divorce suit, and by associating with other women and receiving "passionate letters."

Mrs. Grimes also alleged that he abused and struck her at a hunting camp in Wisconsin.

Claiming that Grimes gets $20,000 a year from the Cardinals, Mrs. Grimes asked for alimony and requested that he be divested of dower rights in their Minevra property.

CANNON QUITS GIRLS' SCHOOL

BLACKSTONE, Va., Oct. 11.—(AP.)—The official connection of Bishop James Cannon, Jr., with Blackstone College for Girls, an institute he founded and headed for almost a quarter of a century, has been severed.

Coincident with an announcement from trustees of the college that the Bishop had been replaced as president of their board by N. P. Angle, of Rocky Mount, Va., the churchman last night made public his letter of resignation as a member and head of the board.

In his letter of resignation, a copy which he telegraphed to the Richmond Times-Dispatch, Bishop Cannon said:

"Since 1928 there has been a division of sentiment among the people in the territory from which the college naturally draws its support. A number of these people,' he stated, "have disagreed with my views.

"I have decided, therefore, without any suggestion from any person or any committee of the college, to present my resignation."

Pilot, Lost in Fog, Dies in Crack-up

MILES CITY, Mont., Oct. 11.—(AP.)—Thomas H. Strickle, 32, of Miles City, pilot of the International Air Transport Company, was killed in the crash of an airplane 35 miles north of Hettinger, N.D.

Strickle was flying from Aberdeen, S. D., to Miles City. He is believed to have become lost in a fog. Eye witnesses said the plane hit the ground head-on.

Navy Buys Aviation Gas for $238,085

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—(INS.)—The Navy yesterday contracted for the purchase of 1,895,000 gallons of aviation gasoline at a cost of $238,085.

DRY LAW STUDY MEMBER HERE

Judge Marcus A. Kavanagh, of Chicago, member of President Hoover's law enforcement commission, here today to address the Pittsburgh Chapter, Knights of Columbus, at their Columbus Day banquet tonight in the William Penn Hotel, said:

"Law can be enforced when an aroused public conscience says, 'Enforce it.' The man on the street will then not sidestep his responsibility.

"Enforcement of the laws of every community lies entirely with the concepts of that community."

Aerial Hits Charged Wire, Killing Two

CANTON, O., Oct. 11.—(INS.)—Two persons were killed and two seriously injured yesterday when a radio aerial they were stringing fell across a high-voltage electric line

The dead are Mrs. Way Pressler and J. H. Wright. Way Pressler, husband of the woman who was killed, and Mrs. J. S. Wright, mother of the other victim, were hurt.

BOARDMAN SET TO HOP TONIGHT

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., Oct. 11.—(INS.)—In an effort to break the existing sustained-flight record of 4,912 miles, Russell Boardman today planned to hop off on a non-stop trans-Atlantic flight tonight or tomorrow. The time of his start depends on weather conditions over the Atlantic, he said.

Boardman, a resident of Boston, hopes to land about 50 miles from Constantinople in Turkey. He figured his gasoline supply of 710 gallons will carry him that far. Boardman's plane is a Bellanca cabin monoplane christened the American Legion. It is powered with a single 300-horsepower motor.

He will be accompanied by John L. Polando, co-pilot.

KQV Asks Full Time Operation

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 11.—Station KQV, Pittsburgh, applied to the Federal Radio Commission today for authority to operate full time on its present wave length until local sunset and to divide time equally with WSMK, Dayton, O., during the evening hours. The station's engineers believe that with 500 watts for KQV and 200 watts for WSMK there will be no material interference during the daylight hours.

"Baering" Down On the News With Arthur "Bugs" Baer

Bugs Baer

A pessimist is man who thinks the country is going to the dogs.

An optimist is the man who thinks the same thing. But he has his rolls and mustard ready.

OCEAN PLANE ARRIVES AT CROYDON

BULLETIN.

CROYDON, England, Oct. 11.—(AP.)—The trans-Atlantic airplane Columbia landed at this air field this afternoon.

PENZANCE, England, Oct. 11.—(AP.)—The trans-Atlantic fliers, Capt. J. Errol Boyd and Lieut. Harry P. Connor, who alighted at Tresco, Scilly Islands, at dusk yesterday, were speeding this afternoon across Southern England on their way to London's Croydon Field for the completion of the veteran monoplane Columbia's interrupted flight from Harbor Grace, N. F.

After an unheralded take-off from Tresco the plane passed over this town at 1:25 p. m. (8:25 a. m., eastern standard time), and 35 minutes later was sighted over Plymouth.

FEELING WAY

The route indicated that the birdmen were holding to the coastline to that point, which would give them a definite guide in shaping a true course for Croydon.

Time of the Columbia's takeoff from the small beach at Tresco had not been received at this town. The fliers landed at Tresco yesterday afternoon because of a defective fuel line, which was repaired.

24 HOURS ACROSS SEA

CROYDON, England, Oct. 11.—(AP.)—Capt. J. Erol Boyd and Lieut. Harry P. Connor hoped to complete today the trans-Atlantic crossing from Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, to Croydon, which they fell just short of making yesterday when their plane, the veteran Columbia, made a forced landing in Tresco, Scilly Islands, 290 miles from its goal.

The two airmen, who left Harbor Grace at 11:20 a. m., Eastern standard time, Thursday, were brought down, it was understood here, by a choked gasoline main. Landing was at about 5 p. m., or noon Eastern standard time, a little more than 24 hours after their start.

OFF COURSE

The plane, in landing at Tresco, was more than 150 miles off of its course, far to the south of Bantry Bay and that section of the Irish

Two Rob Girl Clerk, Crash In Flight

Two bandits held up and robbed a girl payroll clerk as she was leaving the Franklin Savings and Trust Company, Twenty-eighth street and Penn avenue, but while attempting to escape wrecked their machine, and one of the men with the payroll, was captured, police said.

Police said a Negro janitor at the bank who witnessed the holdup jumped on the bandit car and forced the driver to swerve it into a street car. He held the bandit who had the money until police arrived, it was said.

Mains Burst, Flood Wilkinsburg Homes

Cellars in a number of homes were flooded early today when a main of the Pennsylvania Water Company burst in Wood street, between South and Franklin avenues, Wilkinsburg. A few hours earlier another main had burst in Walnut street, near Hawthorne avenue, causing the street to bulge for a distance of about 200 feet.

SLAIN BRIDE'S AUTO FOUND

BLYTHEVILLE, Ark., Oct. 11.—(AP.)—Arkansas adventures of George W. E. (Jiggs) Perry, Milwaukee phantom "husband," credited by authorities with five marriages, have led to the recovery of the automobile of one of his "wives," whom he is accused of slaying, but the quest for Perry himself today seemed far from an end.

Police found the dead woman's automobile in a garage here, learned that Perry had promised to visit a Blytheville girl yesterday, and developed high hopes of catching him. Perry failed to appear.

Today police believed he was in hiding elsewhere, with no intention of visiting Miss Dorothy Davis, 21, brunette daughter of a widow, or of reclaiming the sedan once owned by Mrs. Cora Belle Hackett, who married him at Chicago last June after answering his newspaper want ad. She later was found shot to death on a Northern Wisconsin Indian reservation.

Perry drove here in the sedan, used it in calling on Miss Davis, and stored it in a garage September 9 as security for $150 borrowed from a Blytheville acquaintance.

Secretary Mellon Here, Silent on Politics

Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon returned to Pittsburgh for the week-end to attend to personal business, but was reticent about politics and public affairs.

He was asked about the status of the state political situation and replied:

"I don't know."

He was asked if he believed all nominees on the state Republican ticket would be elected, and said:

"I don't know; I mean I've been too busy with other things."

The Secretary's nephew, W. L. Mellon, former Republican state chairman, was asked yesterday his reaction to the resignation of W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, as national committeeman. He said:

"I've always been a Republican and intend to remain one this time."

ARMSTRONG, KLINE AT RALLY

County Leader, Mayor Pledge Support to Nominee; Absent Chiefs Scored

Local Republican ward leaders, it was indicated today, apparently have no intention of following the Philadelphia stampede to support John M. Hemphill, Democratic and Liberal party gubernatorial candidate. Developments supporting that belief are:

1—Sixteen ward chairmen and a representative of a seventeenth present last night at the first campaign leader meeting here pledged themselves to vote and work for Gifford Pinchot for governor and to support the entire Republican ticket.

2—County Chairman Joseph G. Armstrong gave his unqualified support to Pinchot and scored ward leaders and office holders who failed to attend last night's meeting.

3—Mayor Charles H. Kline, admitted city leader, and City Chairman W. J. Soost both advocated active support of the entire Republican ticket.

4—No outspoken opposition to supporting Pinchot was expressed by any of the assembled leaders, who previously had privately expressed their unwillingness to support Pinchot.

Sixteen of the 32 Republican chairmen of Pittsburgh and a representative of the seventeenth, who were present at the opening of the local campaign for state offices last night in Hotel Henry headquarters replied to an oral questionnaire stating they would vote and work for Gifford Pinchot, nominee for governor and the entire Republican ticket.

In calling the meeting, Armstrong sent invitations to city and county officials, Pittsburgh ward chairmen, leaders in legislative districts outside Pittsburgh and nominees from Allegheny County for Congress, state senators and state representatives.

CHAIRMEN QUIZZED

Ward chairmen present were asked before the meeting convened, three questions:

1—"Will you vote for Pinchot?"

2—"Will you work for his election?"

3—"Will you hold meetings with your district chairmen?"

Regarding the last query, most of the chairmen said it was not customary, but that they would

Coste, Aide Sail For Paris, Oct. 17

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—(INS.)—Capt. Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte, French trans-Atlantic aviators, will sail for Paris October 17, they announced today. The fliers returned yesterday from their nation-wide good will tour. They will receive the $25,000 award of Col. W. E. Easterwood for their flight from Paris to Dallas, Tex., at a dinner Thursday.

Siam's King Coming Here for Eye Cure

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—(INS.)—King Praja Dhipok, ruler of Siam, plans to visit New York next spring incognito, it was learned today. While here he will undergo treatment for an eye ailment.

17 CITY WARD CHAIRMEN RALLY TO PINCHOT'S SUPPORT

ARMSTRONG CALLS FOR LOYALTY

do so if necessary. The first two were answered "Yes" by Congressman P. J. Sullivan, Sixth Ward; Roy D. Schooley, Eighth Ward; W. J. Soost, Eleventh Ward; Michael DeRosa, Twelfth Ward; P. F. Casey, Fourteenth Ward; F. A. Dengler, Sixteenth Ward; Joseph G. Armstrong, Seventeenth Ward, replied in his speech opening the meeting; S. J. Reno, Nineteenth Ward; William Herd, Twenty-first Ward; Justus Schroedel, Twenty-fourth Ward; State Senator Morris Einstein, Twenty-fifth Ward; E. B. Birch, Twenty-eighth Ward; F. A. Sacher, Twenty-ninth Ward; Lon Mackintosh, Thirtieth Ward; C. J. McBride, secretary of the County Tax Board, Thirty-first Ward. The latter said he had held a meeting at which Pinchot was indorsed.

VERONA WILLING

Nick Stabile, representing Alderman John J. Verona, of the Third Ward, said Verona would be for Pinchot and the entire ticket.

State Senator Frank J. Harris, who is mourning the death of his brother, Dennis J. Harris, attended the meeting as a spectator.

Guests included these Pinchot supporters in the primary election: County Commissioner C. C. McGovern, State Senator James J. Coyne, former president of Council James F. Malone and former Judge Frank I. Gollmar, county chairman for the Pinchot campaign committee.

In addition to Commissioner Armstrong, the county was represented by Clerk of Courts Samuel J. Topley, Coroner W. J. McGregor, District Attorney Andrew T. Park and George J. Schad and Charles J. McBride, chairman and secretary of the county tax board.

CITY OFFICIALS

Absentees were Commissioner Edward V. Babcock, Treasurer John Francies, Controller Robert G. Woodside, Recorder of Deeds Samuel D. Foster, Sheriff Robert S. Cain and Register of Wills Joseph N. Mackrell. Armstrong said the latter had sent a letter explaining his absence.

Besides Mayor Kline, city representatives included President of Council John S. Herron and Councilmen C. B. Connelley and M. J. Muldowney, City Treasurer Roy D. Schooley and Public Works Director Edward G. Lang.

Nominees present, in addition to Judge Drew, included Congressman P. J. Sullivan, Joseph G. Armstrong, W. D. Mansfield and Morris Einstein, candidates for the state senate; and these candidates for the state house of representatives: G. C. Metzier, P. J. Maloney, E. B. Goehring, M. J. Spann, C. A. Dietrich, W. T. Bell, James P. Rooney, W. F. Stadtlander, J. A. Rhodes, J. H. McClure, C. C. Baldridge, Arthur Storer, F. J. Riddle, F. E. Hoffman, F. H. Reed, F. C. Gangloff, M. A. Dunn, M. A. Mussmano, T. W. Neely and L. N. Hagmaeir.

Absentees were Congressman Guy E. Campbell, Clyde Kelly, Harry A. Estep and Edmund F. Erk, the latter succeeding the late Stephen G. Porter; State Senator Herman P. Brandt and these nominees for the state house of representatives, J. C. Marcus, J. R. Lynch, C. T. Dwyer, George H. Soffel, James Wettach and Samuel J. Grenet.

Stand By Party, Armstrong Pleads at Meeting

"A Democrat by any other name is still a Democrat, and no red-blooded Republican will vote for one whether they call themselves Liberals, Libertys or anything alse."

So declared County Chairman Joseph G. Armstr g sounding the keynote of the election campaign at the rally of the Republican organization held last night in the Henry Hotel, traditional headquarters of the Republican party 'n Allegheny County.

Echoing Armstrong's sentiments, Mayor Charles H. Kline, District Attorney Andrew T. Park, Judge James B. Drew, State Senator James J. Coyne, City Chairman William J. Soost, Coroner W. J. McGregor, Clerk of Courts Samuel J. Topley, Congressman P. J. Sullivan, City Treasurer Roy D. Schooley, State Senator William D. Mansfield, Mrs. Webster Hinnau, vice chairman of the Republican County Committee, and Mrs. Lillian C. Morgart, vice chairman of the city committee, pledged their support to the entire Republican ticket, "from top to bottom" as Armstrong vehemently declared it should be supported.

SCORES ABSENTEES

Scoring absent elective county officials as "derelict in their duty to the organization which made Armstrong commissioner and Bob Cain sheriff and Woodside controller." Armstrong handicapped by a sore throat, in his speech opening the meeting declared:

"This meeting is to put the spokes of the wheel in the hub where they belong. Every county elective officer should be here to keep this organization together. They were elected by the Republican machine. All of us were, and none of us have any right to throw any monkey wrenches into it. I personally was against Pinchot. I went in and did more against him than anybody can do for the other man in this fight. Pinchot outstepped us as he did eight years ago. We took advantage of every move on the political checkerboard, but he beat us. Now we must be red-blooded sports and not allow ourselves to be led under the banner of the Democratic party that only polled 4,500 votes against our 103,000.

STICK TO PARTY

"The Republican family got together in the primaries and settled the question. Now we are politicians, and the business men can get together and do what they want. They can call the Democratic party Liberal, Liberty or anything else but it's still the Democratic party and every red-blooded delegate here should support the Republican ticket from the top to the bottom."

Judge James B. Drew, nominee for the Superior Court bench, declared:

"I was one of the chief mourners when my friend Francis Shunk Brown was defeated. He would have made perhaps the greatest governor Pennsylvania ever had. But I wouldn't have anybody think that the Republican party cannot take its medicine. We fight out our battles in the primaries. Pinchot won and we should do as we always have done—line up for the nominees. It would be a terrible loss for Pennsylvania to be turned over to the Democratic party. Each time it has had a Democratic governor a Democratic president has been elected at the succeeding election.

COUNTY BY 50,000

"Pinchot will carry Allegheny County by 50,000 to 60,000 and it will be a good thing for the state and the people."

COYNE FOR TICKET

State Senator James J. Coyne declared the situation to be amusing. He said:

"Some of the leaders here tonight have spoken about the licking that they took from Pinchot. They don't know anything about lickings. The Pinchot men had to go through a threshing machine. The fact about this threatened bolt is that Gov. Pinchot found something the matter with the Public Service Commission that Atterbury does not like. Because Atterbury doesn't like it, there's a lot of local manufacturers that sell him motors and machinery that are greatly concerned. Because they sell these things they are for the Liberal candidate.

"I would like to see the registration records of the most of them on the books. I'll bet that they haven't voted three times in 10 years. Most of my candidates got beat. A couple of them got nominated. I'll gladly go along for the whole ticket."

Mayor Charles H. Kline, faultlessly attired in brown tweeds, got a big hand when he rose to speak. Armstrong introduced him as "my boy Charlie." Kline said:

"Vote the straight Republican ticket, to the victor belongs the spoils, and support all the nominees, is my political creed. I was not for Gov. Pinchot, and I told him so. I tried my best to defeat him, but in the William Penn Hotel when I first met him I said that I hoped he would be elected, and I believe he will. Philadelphia picked Francis Shunk Brown. We rallied around him, but he was defeated. Now Philadelphia is not going to support the nominee. Why the change of heart? Sooner or later murder will out. Some day the secret will be known.

SEES NEW PARTIES

"Maybe it's because Pinchot won't build every bridge they want and pave every street in South Philadelphia. If Pinchot is defeated, in two years you may not see the Republican and Democratic parties, but two new ones, the Liberal and Conservative. I sincerely hope that all Republicans, even though they have wet tendencies, will fall in line as they did in 1926. I would not be faithful to the Republican party if I bolted, and I hope all the good people of Allegheny County vote the straight Republican ticket from top to bottom."

Clerk of Courts Samuel J. Topley and Coroner W. J. McGregor pledged their unqualified support to the entire ticket.

Senator William D. Mansfield declaring that all the nominees are satisfactory to everybody including the independents, said:

"This is the softest fight the organization has ever had. The Republicans of Allegheny County should show the so-called Liberals that they are not going to be hoodwinked by any trick names for a Democrat. Everybody seems to be against Pinchot but the voters. There will be no defections from the ranks in our end of the county. We should make this election unanimous."

PARK PLEDGES FORCE

Congressman P. J. Sullivan did not waste any words. He said:

"Everybody knows that this is a fight. As far as myself and my friends are concerned we are for, and will work for the straight Republican ticket. There is no effort hat I will not make for the ticket from top to bottom. want everybody to know just where I stand."

Di.trict Attorne Andrew T. Park pledged t'e support of his entire force to the whole ticket. He said:

"Every man in my office from the top to the bottom is 100 per cent for the entire ticket."

City Chairman W. J. Soost:

"I think it is the duty of every member of the city and county committee to support the entire ticket. I took a beating in my own ward, but we should all be good sports."

City Treasurer Roy D. Schooley said:

"I learned in athletic competition many years ago to be a tolerant winner and a loser. We will all turn in and be for the whole ticket.

There were approximately 300 persons at the meeting. When it adjourned Armstrong announced that the campaign will now get under full way. Other meetings will be called soon for workers. Additional space has been secured in the hotel for the women workers', speakers' and financial committees.

Philadelphia G. O. P. Opens Pinchot War

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 11.—(AP.)—Open warfare on Gifford Pinchot, Republican candidate for Governor, was launched by the Republican ward leaders of this city at a luncheon in the Penn Athletic Club.

Forty-seven of the 48 ward committeemen and other leaders, headed by Recorder of Deeds James M. Hazlett, chairman of the Republican City Committee, declared for John Hemphill, Democratic and Liberal party gubernatorial nominee.

Pinchot, in a radio address last night, said the support of "The quitters in the Philadelphia organization has been bought and paid for," and that the bolting organization leaders "could no more go against the will of their public utility overlords in this campaign, than they can grasp the fact that their day has passed.

Hazlett, in a statement, said:

"My purpose in calling my colleagues together was to inquire as to the feeling of the Republican voters of the respective wards as pertaining to the candidates for the office of Governor. My information is uniformly of strong opposition of the voters to Pinchot's candidacy."

FETE FOR WIVES OF CANDIDATES

A reception in honor of Mrs. James J. Davis, Mrs. Gifford Pinchot and Mrs. James B. Drew, wives of Republican nominees, will be given Thursday afternoon in the Republican headquarters, Henry Hotel, Mrs. Webster Hinnau, vice chairman of the Republican County Committee, announced during her speech pledging support to the ticket at the Republican rally last night.

Mrs. Charles H. Kline, Mrs. E. V. Babcock, Mrs. Charles C. McGovern, Mrs. Mary Flinn Lawrence, Mrs. Lois Downs McBride, and Mrs. James F. Malone and Miss Suzanne Beatty will be aides at the reception. Mrs. Hinnau said the reception will demonstrate that the women of the Republican party are making this campaign bigger and better than ever.

DeForest and Bride Live Apart, Wait His Divorce

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 11.—(AP.)—Married quietly at Ti Juana, Lower California, October 3, Dr. Lee De Forest, noted radio inventor, and his bride, Marie Mosquini, film actress, were living apart in their Hollywood homes today, pending the issuance of a final decree of a New York divorce obtained by the first Mrs. De Forest.

The enforced separation of the couple is required by California law under a decision in the case of the late Rudolph Valentino, who married Natacha Rambova in Mexico before a divorce from his first wife, Jean Acker, became final.

Miss Mosquini is living with her mother.

Dr. De Forest, who has been living at a hotel and apartment, could not be reached yesterday.

Miss Mosquini talked freely of her romance.

She said:

"It was love at first sight. I met Dr. De Forest at the wedding of Bebe Daniels and Ben Lyon last June."

Dr. De Forest said he intended to marry Miss Mosquini "as soon as I am free to do so." A search of the records in Ti Juana yesterday disclosed the marriage.

the bench for nearly 33 years. He was asked:

"Can prohibition be enforced?"

He replied:

"I don't know and prohibition is one subject I am not going to discuss."

Asked when the law enforcement commission would make its report to the President, Judge Cavanagh said he had heard it would be in the early part of December, but could not say for certain.

MUM ON FINDINGS

Reminded that reports were being printed that the attitude of the commission would be that prohibition cannot be enforced, he simply smiled. His attitude on that point might lead the average man to believe his views were the same.

CHICAGO NOT SO BAD

Asked concerning the crime situation in Chicago, Judge Kavanagh said:

"Chicago stands thirty-fourth in the list of homicides, which means 33 other cities have more homicides, based on population.

"There has been plenty of publicity as to Chicago's crime situation, and I am in favor of that. It is helping to arouse public interest. What the future has in store depends largely on the public attitude."

Judge Frank P. Patterson will be the toastmaster at tonight's banquet, with Louis F. S. Cook, president of the Pittsburgh chapter, presiding. Speakers besides Judge Kavanagh will include John B. Kennedy, associate editor of Collier's, and the Rt. Rev. Thomas C. O'Reilly, bishop of Scranton.

AWAIT TAXICAB PARLEY REPORT

John S. Stackhouse, secretary, and Fred Shaffer, business agent of the Pittsburgh Taxicab Drivers' Union, were expected in Pittsburgh today from Boston, Mass., and a report on their conference with Daniel Tobin, president of national union, was awaited here.

In Boston yesterday Tobin told the men to consult with Mayor Charles H. Kline concerning their differences with the Parmelee Transportation Company. Tobin hoped they would settle their differences with the operator of the Green and Yellow taxicab companies without a strike.

VOYAGER FROM AFAR

MARIE ARTINGER, 8

Marie can't speak a word of English, but all alone she came from Austria to Pittsburgh, where at 1110 Province street, North Side, she met for the first time a younger brother and sister.

GIRL, 8, JOINS PARENTS HERE

After traveling alone from Kemeten, Austria, near Vienna, to Pittsburgh, Marie Artinger, 8, is getting acquainted with a brother and sister she never saw and a mother and father who left her in Austria seven years ago to come to Pittsburgh.

Usually little time is required for children to become familiar, but Marie's case is a bit difficult. She speaks German, while her brother and sister, Carl, 4, and Elizabeth, 2, have all they can do to manage the English. Her mother, though, puts aside her work several times a day to act as interpreter for her children.

It was no easy job for Mr. and Mrs. Carl Artinger to have their 8-year-old daughter sent to Pittsburgh. It seems that when they set out for the United States they entrusted Marie to the care of her maternal grandmother.

When the Artingers were firmly established in Pittsburgh they sent for Marie, but the grandmother refused to part with the child. It was only after Attorney Arthur I. Zeiger dispatched numerous and varied telegrams that Marie was permitted to begin her trek to the new country.

REBEL GRI ON BRAZIL TIGHTENS

Revolutionary Forces Tak Important City in South Rio-Sao Paula Line Cut

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Oct. 11.—(AP.)—Victories o Brazilian revolutionary force today drew the net of insurrection tighter about the cities o Rio De Janeiro and Sao Paulo.

Fall of Joinville and San Francisco, state of Santa Catharina, to a rebel force headed by Capt. Caldas Braga, has isolated Florianopolis, or Desterro, sole federal stronghold south of Parana, and has made the position of its garrison precarious.

Between Sao Paulo and Rio De Janeiro a small insurgent force is said to be operating out of Lorena, where the railroad line from the capital city to Sao Paulo has been cut.

STATE'S PROGRESS

There were only two apparent points of government progress, both in the state of Minas Geraes. Federal forces Thursday, it is learned, occupied Barbacenas, railway point, about 80 miles from Bello Orizonte, capital of the state, where the loyal Twelfth Regiment of federal infantry, with six mountain guns, is holding out against strong insurgent forces.

Sao Paulista troops, advancing from just north of the far southern corner of Minas Geraes, captured the town of Oura Fino, and proceeded toward Itajuba.

In capture of Joinville the rebels appeared here to have struck one of the first decisive blows o the revolution in Southern Bra comparable to capture of Pernambuco (Recife) by Parahyba insugents in the northern part of republic.

BRAGA VICTORY

The rebel forces, commanded Capt. Caldas Braga, attacked city, and with only 16 casualt two civilians and one soldier the rebel ranks being killed 13 wounded. San Francisco, located on an island opposite Joinville, also capitulated.

Federal dispatches from Sao Paulo said federal airplanes had bombed Jaguariahyva, just north of Castro, and stated the belief that rebel forces had withdrawn.

AWAIT ARRIVAL

Levine, who is in England, when first hearing of the fate of the two aviators' trans-Atlantic attempt, wired them that he would entrain last night for Cornwall and fly to Tresco, but when he learned their intention of proceeding today he changed his mind and decided to await them here.

Coolidge Urges Liberal Community Chest Support

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Oct. 11.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

This is the month when many localities are replenishing their community chests. In some respects this will not be so easy this year as at other times, because some people will feel it is more difficult to make contributions. But from another angle it will be easier because everyone will realize that the needs for the coming winter will be greater. The calls on all kinds of charitable institutions will be increased and more money must be furnished to meet them.

While there has been depreciation in many classes of property, the fixed income from investments has been little impaired. This country has resources that must be used to give the necessary charitable relief to those in need. Contributions to the various community chests in the coming canvass should be measured not so much by the present prosperity of the giver as by the requirements of the situation.

Accumulated wealth will be of very little value to society unless it voluntarily comes to the rescue in time to prevent public suffering. It must be demonstrated again that the surpassing generosity of the people of the United States will not fail.

Pacific Coast Waits Hearst Return to Accord New Honors to Publisher

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—(Universal.)—William Randolph Hearst was en route today to the Pacific coast, where he will be honored in great civic receptions such as the popular demonstration in Chicago Thursday and those which were accorded him earlier in New York and Boston on his return to this country from Europe.

In Los Angeles, in San Francisco and in Oakland he has been invited to be the official guest of those municipalities in a welcome home. His reception, as described in the invitations tendered him, will be a testimonial not alone to the part he and his publications have had in the upbuilding of the western cities, but will be a tribute to the fearless principles of journalism which brought about the exposure in his newspapers of the secret Anglo-French treaty two years ago.

It was for this that the French government recently characterized him as hostile to France and asked him to leave that country. From coast to coast, leading Americans have branded the act an affront to an outstanding American citizen and to the United States as well.

VETS APPROVE

Veterans' organizations throughout the country have joined with civic authorities and national statesmen in expressions of resentment that France, to whose succor American soldiers went by the hundreds of thousands only a few years ago, now should offer this indignity to a foremost American.

Mr. Hearst, discussing the publication of the secret treaty at the reception given him by Chicagoans at Soldier Field, said that it was done "for what I believed to be the best interests of my country," and that he would do it "again tomorrow, even if I were to be expelled from every country in Europe for doing it."

After the celebration and before he boarded a train for California, Mr. Hearst discussed business conditions, saying:

"Business is good in California, New York and Chicago. This country of ours is a prosperous country right now. It may not be as prosperous as it was last year, or as prosperous as it will be next year, but the majority of the people today have money and have business; and if they will attend to their business and keep out of the hands of get-rich-quick speculators, and have confidence in their country and in themselves they will soon bring back a greater prosperity than we have ever had before.

'BETTER EACH DAY'

"Keep up your business, be satisfied with a little less profit, make things as good as possible, and sell them as cheap as possible, and sell and manufacture as much as possible.

"If you have a good product or a good stock tell the public about it. Make them want it. They have the money to buy anything that they really want. If they don't buy your product it's your fault and not theirs.

LEGION DENIES RUM DEATHS

BOSTON, Oct. 11.—(AP.)—Denials that there had been any deaths or cases of poisoning as the result of the recently completed national convention of the American Legion here were issued by national convention officials. Statements to the contrary were branded falsehoods.

Activity by Federal prohibition agents during the closing hours of the convention resulted in the arrest and fining of one legionnaire for having liquor in his hotel room. Raids on several downtown hotels were made and an order from Jonathan Lewis, Federal prohibition administrator for New England, that liquor peddling be stopped occasioned considerable controversy.

Hunt Clubs Will Hold Steeplechase

GREENSBURG, Pa., Oct. 11.—The fifth annual steeplechase of the Western Pennsylvania Hunts will be held at Huntlands, the George McNary farm, near Greensburg, Monday.

The steeplechase is to be under auspices of the Westmoreland, Rolling Rock, Indiana, Pittsburgh and Sewickley Hunt clubs. Count Rostrowski, internationally known horseman, will ride.

Brackenridge Man Held in Robberies

Held in connection with a series of holdups in Tarentum and adjacent communities, Earl Mason, 20, of Brackenridge, was confined in the county jail today pending court trial. He was arrested yesterday by Chief William Kelly, of Tarentum police, and County Detective Edward Weber. He was bound over to court at a hearing before a Tarentum justice of the peace last night, police said.

State Plans to Sift Brokers' Failure

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—(INS.)—The failure of Prince & Whitely, brokers, will be investigated by the office of the state attorney general, it was reported today. The New York Stock Exchange, which ordered suspension of the 53-year-old firm on Thursday, will be asked to reveal all records of the concern. Attorneys said "the situation would be cleared up early next week, and the company may resume business Tuesday."

Race Victory, Law Suit Greet Congressman

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—(INS.)—Fate today had given Congressman Stanley H. Kunz, of the Eighth Illinois District, a strange deal.

About the time Congressman Kunz' horse Deerfield was brought home a 36-to-1 winner at Hawthorne track yesterday a warrant charging felony was being served on the Congressman.

Deerfield's victory was the first for the legislator's racing colors, although he has kept a stable for three years.

In the felony warrant, Mrs. Anna Rogal charges that she paid Congressman Kunz $850 to assure admission to this country of her mother and two sisters, Budapest residents.

The value of Deerfield's race to the winner was $850.

SCULLY LAUDS UTILITY AIDES

Commenting on the stir in political circles caused by the Liberal party's announcement of the personnel of its ways and means committee, and on newspaper identification of the members with industries, financial institutions and public utilities, Arthur M. Scully, county chairman of the Liberal party, said last night:

"The men comprising our committee, mostly, are identified with important industries and are so well known it would seem to be unnecessary for those opposing us to take the trouble of looking up their connections for emphasizing in the newspapers.

"Nearly all of them have always been in the forefront in Republican campaigns. In this campaign, however, they do not regard Gifford Pinchot as a Republican and believe he is not entitled to election as governor of Pennsylvania."

The Liberal party's areo-caravan to broadcast campaign talks and distribute literature arrived here from Lewistown last night to assist the party's mass meeting next Wednesday night in Syria Mosque.

Scheduled speakers at the meeting include John M. Hemphill, Democratic-Liberal nominee for governonr, and Charles Dorrance, state chairman of the Liberal party.

PAIR ON AERIAL HONEYMOON

While friends thought they were far from the city, Mr. and Mrs. James F. Rider yesterday afternoon were starting an aerial honeymoon trip to New York.

The bride, who was Miss Helen Lord, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William M. Lord, of 6824 Thomas boulevard, had not confided honeymoon plans to her parents. Neither had the bridegroom, son of Mrs. Clara M. Rider, of 5731 Northumberland avenue, and the late J. B. Rider, many years general manager of the Pressed Steel Car Company.

Married Thursday night at the Lord residence, the couple evaded the wedding party at the house and remained in Pittsburgh over night. Yesterday they boarded the Pittsburgh Airways plane for New York, still reticent in revealing honeymoon plans. The bridegroom is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania and the bride was graduated in music from Carnegie Institute of Technology.

14 Dice Shooters Lose $210 in Fines

Fourteen Negroes arrested in a raid on a house at 2141 Wylie avenue late last night were taken to Center Avenue Police Station and later to the office of Alderman Martin Griffin, and fined $15 each. County Detectives Mike Stabile and Philip Goldberg and Constable Louis Shiring, from Alderman Griffin's office, made the raid. They said the Negroes were shooting dice when they entered the house.

Bride Takes Poison, Refuses to Explain

ALIQUIPPA, Pa., Oct. 11.—Mrs. Samuel Parisi, 25, of 209 Second avenue, Aliquippa, was in the Rochester Hospital today, suffering from the effect of poison which, police say, was self-administered in her home yesterday. Mrs. Parisi, a bride of a month, refused to reveal why she had taken the poison. Her condition was regarded as not serious.

Fall Down Steps Fatal to Workman

CONWAY, Pa., Oct. 11.—When he fell down a flight of steps while visiting here, Andrew Drdak, 50, track walker, living at a Pennsylvania Railroad camp at Baden, was killed.

BANNER STEEL YEAR SEEN

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., Oct. 11.—(AP.)—Every indication is offered that the "banner year of 1929" in the structural steel industry will be exceeded in 1931, Charles F. Abbott, executive director of the American Institute of Steel Construction, said at the semi-annual conference of the American Society of Sales Executives.

Abbott said he based his prediction on new uses for structural steel now being developed, including steel in residences, steel plate floor construction and similar possibilities.

Abbott added there was a great deal of construction, including buildings and bridges, awaiting placement, and, when once released, the question of deliveries might cause complications.

More than 25 large non-competitive basis and other large industries were represented at the conference, and the opinion seemed to prevail that business was showing signs of improvement and that 1931 would prove a satisfactory year.

Brokers' Messenger Loses $32,000 Bonds

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—(INS.)—Negotiable securities valued at $32,000, which mysteriously disappeared from the pocket of Thomas Fitzpatrick, a brokers' messenger, were sought today. The messenger said he did not know how he lost the package but thought his pocket was picked while he was riding in an elevator.

JOINT FUNERAL FOR MAN, WIFE

A double funeral will be held tomorrow for Attorney John C. Thompson, 77, veteran member of the Allegheny County Bar, and his wife, Ella Frances Thompson. Thompson died Wednesday, the victim of pneumonia, while Mrs. Thompson died yesterday of the same disease.

The funeral will be held at the home, 135 Lloyd avenue, Edgewood, followed by services in St. Stephen's Protestant Episcopal Church, Wilkinsburg.

Manager Named By Tool Company

FRANKLIN, Pa., Oct. 11.—The Chicago Pneumatic Tool Company here has promoted Leon F. Hoffman to general manager, following resignation of O. C. Estergreen, who has held the position for 15 years.

DOUBT LEGALITY OF VOTE DEVICE

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 11.—Arguments intended to show that the 500 voting machines for which the Philadelphia County commissioners contracted at a cost of $601,835 are illegal were made yesterday before Judge McDevitt in Common Please Court.

Witnesses in a taxpayers' suit, brought by John W. Glover and his wife, Alicia A. Glover, attempted to show that lack of lockout devices, which may permit tampering with the machines, invalidated them in spite of the fact that they have been approved by James J. Walker, secretary of commonwealth.

Ralph B. Umsted, attorney for the Glovers, charged that the machines violated the law in being so constructed that they did not afford absolute secrecy of balloting, and that any person could see and know the number of votes registered for each candidate at any time. He also declared that the mechanism could be tampered with by election officials.

Henry J. Stone, sales manager of the company furnishing the machines, admitted on the stand that the demonstration of the lockout devices which he gave before the county commissioners failed.

Russell J. Griffen, vice president of the company, said they had tried to comply with the specifications and believed they had done so.

The hearing was continued until next Tuesday.

Former N. J. Senator Gets 8-13 Year Term

TRENTON, N. J., Oct. 11.—(AP.)—James Hammond, formerly a New Jersey state senator and president of the Trenton Board of Education, was sentenced to serve from eight to 13 years in prison for embezzlement.

He disappeared seven years ago with about $60,000 belonging to clients and a building and loan association. He was apprehended in Albany, N. Y., by a member of the Trenton Police Department several weeks ago.

Woman Shot During Row, Held With Mate

Police of Center Avenue Station today were holding Edward Terrell, 32, and his wife, Beatrice, 31, Negroes, of 1204 Epiphany street, while they investigated the shooting last night of the Terrell woman. Police said Terrell shot her during a quarrel in their home, the bullet lodging in the shoulder. She was treated at Passavant Hospital and removed to the police station.

Wheeling War Vet Hit by Auto, Dies

WHEELING, Oct. 11.—(AP.)—Run down by an automobile as he was crossing the National Highway to catch a street car, Harry Wadsworth, 50, World War veteran and horse trainer, was so badly hurt he died a short time later in a hospital here. The car was driven by Fred Clark, Wheeling, police reported.

Trips on Tiny Golf Links, Breaks Ankle

OHAMA, Neb., Oct. 11.—(AP.)—Miniature golf may now be classed in the category of "dangerous sports." Roger McKenzie, Omaha salesman, is believed to be the first victim of the corner-lot links. McKenzie broke his ankle when he tripped while walking up an inclined green.

Hawes' Daughter Found Working As Shop Girl

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 11.—(AP.)—In Newark she is just another department store employe, but west of the Mississippi she is Miss Peyton E. Hawes, daughter of United States Senator Harry B. Hawes, of Missouri.

"I came East to go to work and forget I am a senator's daughter," she explained when her secret was discovered, and said she had been working here three weeks and that merchandising had a stronger appeal for her than other activities, in spite of her parents' disapproval.

Miss Hawes is a graduate of Washington University.

10 DRINKERS DIE OF POISONING

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 11.—(INS.)—Liquor made of wood alcohol was blamed today for the death of 10 men in the past 48 hours.

Efforts were being made today to determine from whom the poisoned liquor was purchased.

Dr. Harrison S. Martland, chief medical examiner, said examinations showed all of the victims had been drinking "cheap" liquor.

Five of the dead were unidentified.

Slayer Gets Respite On Eve of Execution

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., Oct. 11.—(AP.)—Burley Adams, condemned slayer of a prohibition agent, who was to have been electrocuted at the state prison here today, was given a respite last night by a writ of habeas corpus in which the constitutionality of electrocution as a means of execution in this state was called into question. There will be a hearing Tuesday at Sparta.

Kingsford-Smith To Hop From Athens

ATHENS, Greece, Oct. 11.—(INS.)—Wing Commander Charles Kingsford-Smith, conqueror of the Atlantic and Pacific, who is attempting to lower Bert Hinkler's solo flight record from England to Australia, was ready today to hop off on the third leg of his flight. He arrived here from Rome last night.

INSURANCE MAN ROBBED BY TRIO

Police and county detectives today were searching for three men who late last night waylaid Millard W. Bauer, of the Greenhill road, Shaler Township, an insurance collector, and robbed him of $150 and $40 in checks, and two other men who held up a gasoline station at Thirty-eighth and Butler streets.

Bauer was held up in the Parkview Plan, Sharpsburg.

He was making his collections and was in a secluded spot when the trio jumped upon him from ambush, he told police. After knocking him down, one of the thugs tore out pockets of his trousers.

John Dorn, employe at the American Oil and Gas Company, reported to police that two men entered the place shortly after midnight and robbed him of $20 at the point of a gun.

James C. McCrease, of 67 Semicir street, North Side, reported to police that a man appeared at his front door with a gun last night and demanded money. McCrease hurled a glass which he had in his hand and the man fled into Riverview Park.

Outlines Object of Cotton Conference

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—The object of a series of meetings throughout the South for reduction of cotton acreage was outlined by Carl Williams, cotton member of the farm board, as a permanent readjustment of southern agriculture so land may be used to its best advantage.

In a radio address he emphasized that soil fertility must be restored and maintained and farming be reorganized "in such a way that changes in the price of cotton will not hereafter alternately make and break the South."

Heinroth Organ Recital Program

Pittsburgh Bridge Stars Win Two State Crowns

Bridge players keep late hours.

At 2:45 a. m. today they were still gathered about the scoreboard in the Fort Pitt Hotel awaiting the posting of results of the second day's play in the state championships.

The results revealed that Pittsburghers won two of the three championships decided last night, thus repulsing the advance of the sharpshootings teams from Philadelphia and New York.

Mrs. Grace Lear and Miss Leona Justice, of Crafton, won the women's pair title; James A. Bailey, of South Hills, and C. E. (Dick) Moodey, of Oakmont, won the men's pair championship, and Levis R. Ayres and Mrs. Jay S. Jones, Jr., of Philadelphia, won the mixed pair crown.

Second in women's pair were the crack Carrick team of Miss Margaret Beech and Mrs. H. D. Stahl, who, with 89 points, were one point behind the winners; Mrs. R. E. Needham, of Greenville, and Miss Virginia Jones, of Youngstown, were third.

H. B. Kirkpatrick, of the Koppers Company, and S. H. Fields, of the America Tar Products Company, placed second in men's pair, and C. E. Hepburn and Dr. I. H. Shelly, of Philadelphia, were third.

Capt. F. G. French and Mrs. H. L. Patterson were second in mixed pair and Joseph H. Smith and Mrs. Mary G. Mead, of Uniontown, were third.

This afternoon and tonight the tournament concludes with play in the team-of-four championships.

VAST THRONG TO PAY HOMAGE TO EUCHARIST SUNDAY

FORBES FIELD CEREMONY TO DRAW 50,000

Priest, Holy Name Society Advisor, Explains Place Of Rite in Catholic Faith

Eucharist Day will be observed at Forbes Field beginning at 7 o'clock Sunday night with upwards of 50,000 Catholic men paying tribute to the Sacrament of the Eucharist.

The Rev. Joseph Lonergan, district spiritual advisor of the Holy Name Society, which is sponsoring the religious spectacle, has written the following article in explanation of the Eucharist. Father Lonergan is pastor of St. Paulinus Church, Clairton.

By REV. JOSEPH LONERGAN.

The sacraments of the Catholic church are nought else than a visible guarantee, authenticated by the word of Jesus and the usage of the apostles, that Jesus is working in the midst of us.

At all the important stages of our little life, in its heights and in its depths, at the marriage-altar and at the cradle, at the sick bed, in all the crises and shocks that may befall us, Jesus stands by us under the veils of grace-giving sacrament as our Friend and Consoler, as the physician of soul and body, as our Saviour.

DEEPEST AND HOLIEST

But among the sacraments the Eucharist is deepest and holiest fact of all. For so completely does Jesus disclose Himself to His disciples that He enters into them as a personal source of grace. Jesus shares with His disciples His most intimate possession, the most precious thing that He has, His own self, His personality as the Godman. He enters into a real union of flesh and blood with us and binds us to His being as the branch is bound to the vine.

The Holy Eucharist or Blessed Sacrament is Jesus Christ true God and true man living under sacramental veils. This is a plain and simple statement, and is the whole matter, just as understandable in these few words as in a thousand pages, for it is not comprehensible at all by human reason.

QUESTION OF FAITH

It is a matter of faith entirely, and rests utterly and solely and finally upon Christ's word, and the authority of His church, which has held it from the beginning. It completely transcends any effort of man's reason; it is not within the compass of nature's laws; it is in the supernatural order, a mystery, as much over and above nature and the processes of nature as the Incarnation and the Trinity.

In fact these three correlated mysteries of the Eucharist, the Incarnation and the Trinity are a wonderful triad which characterizes and marks off the Catholic religion. Indeed a religion that is not super-natural, and falls within the compass of human reason, is not a religion but a philosophical formula.

A religion revealed and instituted by God must bear the mark of God; it must be supernatural. That God becomes man—the basis of the Catholic religion—is altogether beyond the reach of the human mind. It is of divine conception and origin, supernatural in thought and in fact.

The notion that this fundamental doctrine of the Catholic faith is merely a reflex of the pagan legends of mythological divinities at times assuming human forms, is a complete misunderstanding of both the Catholic belief and the pagan stories. The mythological divinities were never supposed to become incarnate. They merely assumed the shapes or appearances of men; they are simulacra.

TRUE GOD AND MAN

Christ is true man and true God. His human nature lifted up and united with His divinity in His divine person, the word made flesh. To trace the Catholic doctrine of the Incarnation to pagan legends is to understand neither the doctrine nor the legends.

The Incarnation is the central doctrine of the Catholic faith. You may say that you don't understand it. I answer, 'To be sure, you don't understand it, for if you understood it, it would not be what it is, the one event in human history which transcends history, and which remade history when man most needed remaking.' For the old world was dying, and Christ came to bring new life, new life beyond the power of pagan man, a supernatural life, a miraculous life, which was to save what was good in the old and create a new civilization.

Strange and startling as that event was, it perpetuated something which is equally strange and startling.

Christ instituted the sacrament of the Eucharist, and in it gave Himself for the spiritual nourishment of mankind to the end of time. This too is as incomprehensible as God becoming man. It is not measurable by the human mind, and like the Incarnation transcends the natural order. It is the Incaranation perpetuated.

ABIDES WITH US

Christ became man for the salvation of souls, and the God-man still abides with us for the salvation of souls. The Catholic church is Christ with us. It is the perpetual adoration and worship of Christ as He appointed to us the way.

The Eucharist is Christ, infinite and eternal, who condescends to veil Himself in the Host, and confide Himself to the care of His own creatures. This is the Catholic belief; this is the Catholic practice.

The sacrament of the Eucharist is the strongest, profoundest, most intimate memorial of the Lord, until He comes again. And therefore in the Eucharist we can never forget Jesus, though centuries and millenia pass, and though nations and civilizations are ever perishing and rising anew. And therefore in the Eucharist there is no heart in the world, not even the heart of father and mother, that is so loved by millions and millions, so truly and loyally, so practically and devotedly, as is the heart of Jesus.

PAVILION FOR ALTAR TO BE USED IN EUCHARIST MASS MEETING AT FORBES FIELD

Hold Red Shield Day In Army Appeal

Red Shield Day was being observed throughout the county today, the last of the campaign of the workers of the Salvation Army to raise $112,000 in the annual home service appeal for another year of welfare work. Salvation Army girls were to be stationed throughout the city and county to solicit funds. Only a small part of the total amount has thus far been raised in the campaign, its leaders announce.

Braddock Girl, 4, Severely Burned

Rose Mary Reed, 4, Negro, of 1007½ Willow way, Braddock, was in a critical condition today in the Braddock General Hospital from burns suffered last night when her clothing ignited from a bonfire in the yard of a neighbor, according to hospital authorities. The girl was taken to the hospital by her parents.

HOLY ROSARY DEDICATION

Dedication ceremonies for the new Holy Rosary Catholic Church, Lang avenue and Kelly street, will be held tomorrow morning with the Rt. Rev. Hugh C. Boyle, bishop of the Pittsburgh Catholic diocese, officiating.

The Rev. D. J. Maladey, pastor, has named five priests, all graduates of the Holy Rosary parochial school, to assist the bishop. The dedicatory address will be presented by the Rt. Rev. Edward A. Pace, vice rector of the Catholic University.

Pastors of several Catholic churches of the Pittsburgh district will assist in the services. The Rev. H. A. Carlin, assistant priest at Holy Rosary, will act as master of ceremonies.

Democrats Open Noon Rallies Monday

Attorney Charles Alvin Jones, chairman of the local Democratic state campaign, will speak at the initial noon meeting Monday in the Magee Building headquarters, 334 Fourth avenue, according to announcement by County Chairman David L. Lawrence. Ralph E. Smith, chairman of the meetings and speakers' committee, will preside.

Amplifiers will carry the voices to the sidewalk audiences. Noon meetings will be continued daily, except Sunday, until the end of the campaign, Lawrence said.

HEBREW CLASS TO GRADUATE TOMORROW

Institute Students to Get Diplomas at Exercises In B'Nai Israel Synagogue

Graduation exercises of the B'nai Israel Hebrew Institute will be held tomorrow evening at the B'nai Israel Synagogue, Negley avenue, with Rabbi B. A. Lichter as chairman.

Diplomas will be presented by Saul Schein, president of the congregation, and awards for scholarship and efficiency will be made by H. M. Caplan, chairman of the school board.

The class includes Ella Eisman, Abraham Fischler, Herman Denmark, Bernard Kurtz, Samuel Lowenthal, Isadore Slutsky, Sylvia Feldman, Hyman Stoller, Abraham Tyktin and Irving Weirs. Nathan Savage is principal of the school. After graduation, members of the class will continue their Hebrew studies in a special high school course.

The school is conducted four times a week after public school hours and consists of an elementary and high school department. It has a daily atendance of 175 pupils.

EX-PASTOR WED 50 YEARS

The Rev. E. E. Manley, formerly of Pittsburgh, now pastor of the Central Church of Christ, Martinsburg, W. Va., and Mrs. Manley, have celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary during the past week.

Rev. Manley

The Rev. Manley, 68, has served pastorates in Altoona, Pittsburgh, Scranton, Norfolk, Va., and Martinsburg, W. Va. He also taught school in Canton, Pa., before the ministry. Mr. and Mrs. Manley were married October 6, in Ralston Pa.

Mrs. Manley

They have two sons, Harold C., of Buchanan, N. Y., and R. G. Manley, of Carsdale, Pa.; two daughters, Mrs. J. C. Figart, of Troy, Pa., and Miss Dorothy Manley, of Martinsburg, W. Va., and seven grandchildren.

$300 Fire Ddmages Goodwill Building

The Community House of the Pittsburgh Goodwill Industries, at 2807 Liberty avenue, was damaged to the extent of $300 by fire of undetermined origin last night. The blaze, discovered by the watchman, was extinguished after a battle of almost an hour.

Philadelphia Man Heads State Body; Fayette Leads in New Classes

SCRANTON, Pa., Oct. 11. (AP.)—Delegates to the sixty-eighth annual convention of the Pennsylvania State Sabbath School Association re-elected Harry E. Paisley, Philadelphia, as president for another term.

The delegates also voted to hold next year's convention in Altoona and to meet in New Castle the following year. Both Altoona and New Castle had invited the association convention for 1931.

OTHER OFFICERS

Other officers elected were:

Treasurer, Joseph M. Steele, Philadelphia; convention secretary, Dr. A. Monroe Hall, Williamsport; vice presidents, F. E. Parkhurst, Wilkes-Barre; Mrs. W. Burnett Easton, Stroudsburg; Charles Steele, Northumberland; H. C. Heckerman, Bedford; John C. Silesley, Greensburg; Prof. O. R. Myers, Huntingdon; John E. Person, Williamsport; Dr. J. Manon, Charleroi; Arthur P. Zuck, Erie; Frank H. Steen, Bellevernon; R. E. English, Grove City; Mrs. John S. M. Pratt, Coatesville; Allan Sutherland, Philadelphia; Edwin G. Trexler, Allentown; Henry E. Cole, Pittsburgh; directors for three years, J. W. Vickerman, Bellevue; Ives L. Harvey, Altoona; Earl Craig, Beaver.

Vickerman, chair, submitted the report of the nomination committee.

FAYETTE IN LEAD

Fayette County led the entire state in formation of new classes during the year just closed, H. C. Cridland, Wilkinsburg, told the adult division.

Collections of the association totaled $79,401.13, C. S. Heinz, Pittsburgh, chairman of the finance committee, announced.

Foes of prohibition were scored when the Rev. Dr. A. E. Driggers, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Kittanning, spoke before 2,000 delegates.

DISCIPLES WILL GREET PILGRIMS

Twenty-five delegates from Australia and New Zealand to the annual convention of the Disciples of Christ in Washington, next week, will arrive in Pittsburgh tonight and will be guests of the local churches of that denomination tomorrow and Monday.

Members of the party will fill pulpits here tomorrow morning and night. Tomorrow afternoon they will be taken to Bethany, W. Va., birthplace of the Disciple movement, now numbering 2,000,000 adherents. Monday they will be taken on sightseeing tours and on Monday night will be tendered a reception at the First Christian Church, Montgomery avenue and Arch street, North Side.

Johnstown Doctor Found Dead in Office

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Oct. 11.—Dr. Walter O. Bader, 50, prominent physician, was found dead at his office. Heart disease was attributed as the cause.

Organist

FREDERIC W. LOTZ

ORGAN RECITAL AT EMORY

Frederic W. Lotz, organist at the Emory Methodist Episcopal Church, North Highland avenue and Rippey street, will present an organ recital tomorrow night on the church's newly reconstructed organ.

Among the changes that have been made are the provision of a new console, the addition of a manual of keys, the electrification of four manuals with organ swell shades, a new Gamba stop added to the great organ string section, and a new set of hammers and electrification of the chimes.

At the evening service the Rev. Dr. W. Wofford T. Duncan will speak on "The First Organ." "Dahlia Day" will be observed at the morning service, when a friend of the church will present a display of dahlias. Dr. Duncan will speak on "The Flowers of Fall."

JONES TO OPEN MEETINGS HERE

Bob Jones, evangelist and lecturer, of Montgomery, Ala., will open a series of meetings beginning October 19 at Memorial Hall. The meetings will be held every evening at 7:45 o'clock, and will continue through November 3.

During his series of meetings here he will speak on "Where We Are Headed." There will be a special musical program at the opening of each service. An effort is being made to have the same singers who participated in the meetings on the North Side take part in those at Memorial Hall.

Dean to Officiate At Trinity Oct. 19

The Rev. Dr. Charles E. Jackson, dean of St. Mark's Pro-Cathedral, Grand Rapids, Mich., will conduct the services, both morning and evening, in Trinity Episcopal Cathedral, Sixth avenue, on Sunday, October 19. The Rev. Dr. Homer A. Flint will conduct the services at Trinity tomorrow.

LUTHERANS LED IN PRAYER BY INDIAN CHIEF

Philadelphia Gets 1932 Convention; Pittsburghers Honored in Elections

By THE REV. L. W. RUPP.

(The Rev. Mr. Rupp will write daily exclusive dispatches for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, featuring those highlights of special interest to Pittsburgh district Lutherans during the sixth biennial convention of the United Lutheran Church now being held in Milwaukee.)

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Oct. 11.—Led in prayer in Cree tongue by Chief Malcom Mitchell, Rocky Boy, Mont., who wore full Indian costume, the United Lutheran church for the first time received an Indian on its speakers' platform. Chief Mitchell appeared in a group of speakers representing United Lutheran work among 14 nationalities in America.

The Rev. Fedor Ruppeldt, official visitor from the Lutheran church of Czecho-Slovakia, addressed the session on the value of the United Lutheran church in aiding the church of Eastern Europe. Pittsburgh delegates were particularly interested because Czecho-Slovakians enroll in the Pittsburgh Synod as well as in Pittsburgh churches of the Slovak Zion Synod of America.

PRAISES FINNS

Dr. Henry H. Bagger, Pittsburgh, president of the Pittsburgh Synod, replying to the Rev. Alfred Haapanen, Hancock, Mich., and the Rev. John Margelin, Iron Mountain, Mich., representatives of Finnish Suomi Synod, made an outstanding address, saying:

"The Suomi Synod is overbalanced by opportunities. Increasing mention of Finns in church publicity opens our eyes to their splendid value to all synods."

PITTSBURGHERS ELECTED

Congratulations are coming to the Pittsburgh delegation on honors to the local synod in elections. The Rev. Dr. Ellis B. Burgess and Attorney Robbin Wolf were elected to the important board of adjudication, the supreme court of the United Lutheran Church. Dr. John Aberly, president of Gettysburg Seminary, Gettysburg, was elected to the committee on church papers.

Pennsylvania won the 1932 convention by a unanimous vote to accept Philadelphia's invitation. St. Louis, Nashville, Asbury Park and Lacrosse withdrew their invitations to permit a unanimous vote.

SEMINARY HEAD AT SHADYSIDE

Dr. John M. Vander Meulen, president of the Louisville Presbyterian Seminary, will speak tomorrow at Shadyside Presbyterian Church, in the place of the Rev. Dr. Hugh Thomson Kerr, who is traveling in the West.

Dr. Vander Meulen was called to Louisville after a successful pastorate at Oak Park, Ill. He has spoken in Pittsburgh a number of times. The vesper chorus, under the direction of Earl Mitchell, will present musical numbers.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Name Nov. 12 For Searles Wedding

Though we usually think of spring and summer as the time for romance, winter is not far behind. Among the announcements for fall weddings is that of a daughter of a prominent Pittsburgh family, Martha Elizabeth Searles, daughter of the Edward J. Searleses, of Bryant street, who has chosen November 12 as the date for her marriage to Paul Autenreith, son of the J. L. Autenreiths, of the King Edward Apartments.

Martha has named her bridal party, too. Her sister, Peggy, will be the maid of honor, and the bridesmaids will include Linda Munroe, Jessie Speer and Katherine James, and Jean Sencabaugh, of Cleveland.

Laurence Thebaud, of Buffalo, N. Y., will be the best man, and the ushers will include Henry Scheetz, Jr., Vincent MacGuinnes, and the bride-elect's two brothers, John and William Searles.

Church Wedding

Dorothea Cate, daughter of the Edgar R. Cates, of Stanton avenue, will be married this evening to Andrew Meserve Rankin, son of the Walter Polland Rankins, of Boston, Mass. The ceremony will take place at 7:30 o'clock in the First Unitarian Church with the Rev. Frank Edwin Smith as the officiant. A reception in the Cate home will follow.

The bride will wear a simple medieval gown of white satin, having long sleeves, and a tulle veil held by a cap of lace, having a long train of lace falling over the train of tulle. Her bouquet will be of white roses, gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Pendleton Scully, daughter of the Charles D. Scullys, of Howe street, as the maid of honor, will wear yellow flat crepe, trimmed with yellow velvet. She will carry cactus dahlias in orchid shades tied with ribbon. The bridesmaids, Dorothy Duncan, of Chicago; Hope Slade, of Fall River, Mass.; Molly Harlow, of Concord, Mass., a cousin of the bride, and Edith Darrach, of Greenwich, Conn., all classmates of the bride at Vassar, will wear gowns of apricot flat crepe and velvet, and carrying bronze and yellow cactus dahlias tied with yellow ribbon.

And I might add, the church will be banked with cibotium ferns, palms and bamboo, with standards of white chrysanthemums.

The best man will be Walter Rankin, of Boston, brother of the bridegroom, and the ushers will include Kenneth Rankin, another brother; Gilbert Heublein, of Hartford, Conn.; Paul Cotter and George Mastaglio, of Boston; George Morecroft, of Pittsburgh, and Arthur Gow, of New Haven.

Today the Horace Forbes Bakers, of Sewickley, gave the wedding breakfast, and this evening Mrs. Cornelius D. Scully and her daughter, Pendleton, will give a buffet supper in their Howe street home.

Modern Art Talk

Everybody's looking forward to the hunter trials the Sewickley Hunt will hold on Thursday afternoon, October 23, at Brandywine Farm, the Sewickley Heights place of the Morgan Burdette Schillers. The time of the trials is set at 2:30 o'clock. And among the awards will be the Brandywine cup, offered by Mr. Schiller for annual competition over the same or a similar course. This cup must be won three times by the same person for permanent possession.

After the hunt the Schillers will entertain with a buffet tea in their home, just being completed. By the way the Harry Darlingtons will have one of the judges, E. Skipwith Bruce, of Baltimore, as their house guest.

October Bride

The marriage of Miss Ruth Elizabeth Fraser, of Quincy, Mass., formerly of Ben Avon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Fraser, became the bride of Charles A. Wallace, of New York, on Friday evening, October 3, in the home of the bride.

The Rev. Dr. W. Charles Wallace, president of Westminster College, New Wilmington, O., assisted by the bride's brother-in-law, the Rev. F. E. Vogan, of Greensboro, Vt., and the Rev. Allen J. Crooks, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, of Brookline, Mass., officiated.

The bride wore an empire gown of ivory satin with double puff sleeves and a veil of tulle arranged in coronet style. She carried cream-colored sweetheart roses showered with lilies of the valley. She was attended by her sister, Mrs. F. E. Vogan, as matron of honor, who wore pink satin and carried pink talisman roses and delpinium. Hugh Gunn Fraser, brother of the bride, was best man, and Joseph McFate, of New Castle, Pa., was an usher.

The bridegroom is a graduate of the Law School of the University of Pennsylvania. After a wedding trip through Eastern Canada, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace will live in Jackson Heights, L. I.

Miss Dorothy Parker, daughter of William Parker, of Mt. Lebanon, became the bride of Laurence Braden, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lou Braden, of Dormont, in the Mt. Lebanon Methodist Episcopal Church yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The Rev. James Alvin Wagner officiated. Mrs. Melvin Knoett, sister of the bride, was the matron of honor, and Thomas Weldon Eicher, of Dormont, was the best man. Reese Geisinger, 'cellist, was accompanied by Mrs. Charles H. Arnold, Jr.

The bride wore wood-brown transparent velvet and carried roses and lilies of the valley. After a two weeks' motor trip Mr. and Mrs. Braden will be at home in Ralston place, Mt. Lebanon.

Idaho Man to Claim Rich German Estate

The estate, estimated worth more than a half-million dollars, includes an ancient 30-room castle dating back 300 years and marking a sharp contrast to the little farm and four-room cottage in which Marenholtz has lived wtih his wife and family.

Announce Uniontown Bank's Liquidation

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—(AP.)—Voluntary liquidation of the Uniontown National Bank and Trust Company, of Uniontown, Pa., effective September 20, was announced yesterday by the controller of the currency. The bank had a capital of $25,000 and was absorbed by the Second National Bank, of Uniontown.

Worker Falls Dead In Steel Plant

Nick Stepinovich, 58, employed in the South Side plant of the Jones and Laughlin Steel corporation, died suddenly early today while at work. Fellow-employes who saw him fall from an 18-inch high buffing block, took him to South Side Hospital, where he was pronounced dead.

Sewickley Bank Granted Charter

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—(AP.)—The controller of the currency issued a charter yesterday to the Union National Bank, of Sewickley, Pa. The institution will have a capital of $100,000. Eugene Murray is president and Frank R. Denton, cashier.

Wedded 68 Years, Pair Credit Cooking

HUTCHINSON, Kan., Oct. 11.—(AP.)—Mr. and Mrs. Henry Harrison Harading today celebrated the sixty-eighth anniversary of their marriage. The secret of a long, happily married life, they said, is good cooking and good housekeeping.

CANCELLIERES' PLEA DENIED

An appeal to the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania from the Superior Court by John C. Cancelliere and Joseph Cancelliere, brothers, from conviction in Criminal Court on a charge of assault and battery, was refused by the Supreme Court prior to adjournment of its session here.

The brothers were convicted in April, 1929, in connection with an alleged assault upon their brother-in-law, Michael Berardino, of New Kensington, on Stanton avenue, near their home. The conviction was upheld by the Superior Court.

Berardino was granted an appeal to the Supreme Court from the Superior Court, where he was refused a new trial in connection with his conviction in Criminal Court for attempted felonious assault and battery, growing out of a collision between his automobile and an automobile containing his wife, Mrs. Margaret Berardino, and her brother, John C. Cancelliere, on Stanton avenue, near Hoeveler street, August 26, 1928. Berardino was accused of deliberately running into the other car.

AMERICAN BAR LEADER DEAD

WILMINGTON, Del., Oct. 11.—(INS.)—Josiah Marvel, aged 64, Democratic national committeeman from Delaware and president of the American Bar Association, died suddenly at his home, "Nantocoko," near here, early today, as the result of a heart attack.

Marvel had been in apparent good health and only yesterday was expected to visit this city to attend the hearings of Senator Nye's Senate probe of the recent primary election of Delaware.

He was defeated by Thomas F. Bayard for the senatorial nomination of his party after a hot fight.

Generally recognized as a "dry," Marvel lost out when the delegates were called upon to support Bayard, an avowed wet.

Brentwood Revival To Be Continued

Evangelistic services will continue next week in the Brentwood Christian Church, Catskill avenue and Brownsville road, the Rev. O. R. Clary, pastor, under the direction of the Rev. C. C. Crawford, county evangelist of the Disciples of Christ. His subject at 11 a. m. tomorrow will be "The Holy Spirit in the Old Testament" and at 8 p. m. on "The Holy Spirit in the New Testament." Thirty-two new members had been received up to Monday.

R-101 VICTIMS GO TO GRAVE

LONDON, Oct. 11.—(AP.)—In the brilliant sunshine of a chill October morning the 48 bodies of victims of the R-101's destruction in France last Sunday morning today were taken from Westminster Hall to commence their last journey to one huge grave at Cardington.

Promptly at 10 a. m. the funeral procession, headed by a Royal Air Force band, commenced the march through silent streets which had been closed to ordinary traffic and which were lined by thousands of people who were unable to pass the coffins yesterday when they lay in state in Westminster.

Premier MacDonald, the dominion premiers, representatives of foreign powers and other prominent persons joined the cortege.

Dr. Hugo Eckener, commandant of the dirigible Graf Zeppelin, who arrived in London yesterday evening, will act as special representative of the German government as well as of the Zeppelin company at the ceremonies today. He will lay a wreath on the grave at Cardington for the German government.

OIL INVESTORS SUE DOHENY

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 11.—(AP.)—A suit for an accounting charging Edward L. Doheny and the Richfield Oil Company with conspiring to defraud stockholders of the Pan-American Western Petroleum Company, was on file here today.

John C. Blythe, of St. Louis, who said he represented class "B" stockholders in Pan-American Western, filed the suit. He charged Doheny sold a controlling interest in the company to Richfield for a "wholly inadequate and unconscionable sum" because of a fear that the government would be victorious in an oil lease cancellation suit affecting the Pan-American company, now under consideration.

An accounting was demanded to determine the sum of money Doheny allegedly received from Richfield for transfer of the controlling stock, and judgment was asked for the value of the stock.

Treasury Bill Issue Over-Subscribed

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—(AP.)—The Treasury's $102,525,000 issue of 62-day Treasury bills, for which bids were opened yesterday, was oversubscribed by almost $260,000,000. The bills are to be issued in two series, about half to be dated October 15 and maturing December 16, and the remainder to be dated October 16 and maturing December 17.

Potentates Guests As 60 Enter Shrine

Sixty novices were initiated into Syria Temple, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, last night. The initiation was preceded by a business meeting and the annual banquet. Potentate Charles H. Landefeld and all past potentates took part, the past potentates being guests of honor.

Hotel Men Re-elect Green as President

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Oct. 11.—(AP.)—Re-election of Thomas D. Green, of New York, as president, and selection of Boston as the 1931 meeting place completed business of the convention of the American Hotel Association here.

Attorney Asks Fees From Mother-in-Law's Heirs

Attorney George H. Calvert appeared before Judge H. Walton Mitchell in Orphans' Court yesterday to testify regarding his services in connection with the estate of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Catherine Anderson, in behalf of his petition for a fee.

Mrs. Anderson died in 1915 and her husband, C. A. Anderson, who died a few months ago, was executor and trustee. Calvert recounted work he had done and testified he considered his services worth $500 a year for 14 years, or $7,000.

C. A. Anderson, Jr., his brother-in-law, president of the Pittsburgh Valve, Foundry and Machine Company, testified he had heard his father ask for a bill and Calvert tell him to forget about it. Calvert's petition for a fee followed exceptions to the account of the Bessemer Trust Company, trustees of the estate, which did not include a fee for him.

Club Honors Head, New Members

One of the most delightful president's day receptions held this season was that of the Southern Club yesterday in the Hotel Schenley. It inaugurated the twenty-eighth year of the club and was in honor of the 23 new members and Mrs. James McFall, who is beginning her second year as president. In her little speech of welcome, Mrs. McFall paid tribute to the faithfulness and long service of Mrs. Fannie Loney Hooff, Mrs. Frederick Marshall and Mrs. Joseph W. Marsh.

The program, which was arranged by Mrs. William O'Lee, was one of unusual beauty and was given by Eein Glen Campbell, with Adalaine Merrill Biddle at the piano and Oscar Davis, 13-year-old violinist, with Janet Spaugh accompanying. Both soloists delighted with their artistry, the boy no less for the surprise one felt at his achievements. And, of course, everybody sang "Dixie."

There were especially lovely decorations, great baskets of zinnias and others of cosmos being placed here and there, while on the tea table was a long, narrow arrangement of chrysanthemums, large and small, in the fall shades. Mrs. Joseph W. Marsh and Mrs. C. Perry Kiefer poured at either end of the long table, and the social committee members were hostesses.

Oakland Affair

The music and general entertainment committee of the Woman's Club of Oakland, of which Mrs. Thomas J. Carroll and Mrs. Warren Trigg are chairman and vice chairman, has arranged the program for president's day on Friday afternoon in the Hotel Schenley. The new president, Mrs. John Walter Frey, and her officers, will be honor guests. The program will be by Mrs. Paden Hissom, violinist; Mrs. Frank W. Myler, contralto; Miss Dorothy Ottman, lyric soprano, and Mrs. Finley Speer, reader. The accompanists will be Mrs. H. D. Everett and Thomas J. Carroll, Jr. After the program, tea will be served by Mrs. R. W. Kaufman and Mrs William Jones and their committee, with Mrs. Norval J. Daugherty and Mrs. Ernest H. Bingler, past presidents, pouring.

Modern art and decoration were discussed yesterday at the Turtle Creek Woman's Club meeting for which Mrs. J. B. Johnston, Mrs. J. H. Eyler and Mrs. Charles Milne were hostesses. Mrs. J. L. Kemerer had a paper on "Modern Art—Will It Last?" Mrs. L. O. Myhre one on "New Lines For Old—Modern Furniture," and Mrs. Robert Patterson on "Decorating the House a la Modernism."

Motion pictures offer not only valuable recreational and educational advantages but also present so many types of social behavior that club women are interested in the pictures largely as a social problem, Mrs. Ambrose Nevin Diehl told College Club members yesterday when she discussed "Why We Are Interested in Motion Pictures."

Mrs. Diehl, who is chairman of motion pictures in the General Federation of Women's Clubs, mentioned recent movements in motion picture censorship, particularly in the elimination of such errors as tend to offend good taste. She stressed the need of more pictures suitable for adolescents, better selection of story material and the employment of more alert, intelligent directors.

An orchestra will be one of several unusual features at the benefit theater party which the Nurses' Alumnae Association of the Braddock General Hospital will have at the Pitt on Monday night. A candy sale will be in charge of Mrs. Esther Shaffer and her aides. Mrs. William Brotherton is general chairman.

With Mrs. George Beadling as hostess and Mrs. L. E. Becraft leader, the Carnegie Woman's Club devoted its program to science yesterday afternoon in the Y. W. C. A. Mrs. W. C. C. Johnson, Mrs. Jean McBride, Mrs. Charles Hermann and Mrs. Leroy Peel gave the papers which were on "The Mechanical Man," "Leprosy and Its Cure," "Nicaraguan Canal" and "Hudson River Tunnels." Mrs. Walter Yourd sang, accompanied by Mrs. R. G. Hagan, and at roll call the members named a scientist or stated a scientific fact.

Mrs. George Ellis Jones, who, accompanied by her two young sons, attended Vassar College this summer, will review her course in the Euthenics Institute there as the program for the first meeting of the mothers' group of the University of Pittsburgh Alumnae. The meeting is planned for Wednesday evening, October 22, at Heinz House.

The Taylor Allderdice Parent-Teacher Association will hold its first meeting of the year on Wednesday evening in the high school. An informal reception for parents and teachers will be held from 7:30 to 9 followed by a social hour in the cafeteria. Mrs. O. L. Clavis is the new president.

Miss Jewel Foley, president, and Miss Ella King Vogel are representing the Pittsburgh Business and Professional Women's Club at the northeast regional conference being held under auspices of the National Federation of B. P. W. Clubs in Atlantic City today, tomorrow and Monday. Mrs. Janet Snyder, president of the Wilkinsburg Club, and Miss Virginia Hitchon are representing that organization.

Elsie Breese Mitchell, Congress of Clubs music chairman, will present a recital in Youngstown, O., Tuesday evening before the Music Teachers' Association of that city.

NEW GOWNS ARE REMINISCENT OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Oct. 11.—It seems to be fitting that the tremendous revolution experienced in the sartorial world should find its expression in frocks so reminiscent of the French revolution and the early days of the glittering first empire. Elaborate ballroom toilettes were an essential part of the wardrobe in those days and an echo of their splendor and picturesque detail is to be seen in the high-waisted, softly draped and extremely low-cut bodice that is to be found in some of the newest models current today. The long, straight-hanging skirt is another detail that savors of that period and it is to be found on all of those frocks that subscribe to the regime of the first empire. Satin is the ideal fabric for such frocks as its graceful hanging qualities are at their best in the soft long skirt. Such frocks are splendid for the woman who carries her gowns with an air and is the possessor of a lithe figure and good carriage. The petite woman would be wise to draw her satorial inspiration from some other period of history than the Revolutionary, as such lines are not for her.

MOLYNEUX is one of the couturiers who has turned back the book of yesteryear to find inspiration for his ultra-modern creations. The period reminiscent of the Revolution and the first empire is plainly visible in the inspiration of many models shown in his current collection. The frock sketched is typical of that epoch with its high waist and shirred, straight hanging skirt which reaches to the instep. The material is lustrous oyster satin and is splendidly set-off by delicate strass, crystal and sliver embroidery on the original shoulder straps and skirt edge which is slightly scalloped.

* * *

● A PIQUANT CONTRAST to the modes of other days is to be found in the sketch of the jaunty little sports ensemble that is so typical of these times. It is by Schiaparelli and is mixed jersey-tweed in orange, beige and brown. The jacket is belted with a band of the jersey-tweed and a large pocket is placed at one side only. Three radiating tucks at each side of the skirt accentuate the crisply flaring line. The scarf and beret are of orange and beige knitted wool and the heavy beige leather gloves establish their relationship by the use of the same material.

Motor Policeman Hurt by Truck Sues

Claiming $25,000 damages for injuries in a collision between his motorcycle and a truck, Martin T. O'Toole, Pittsburgh motorcycle patrolman, filed suit against L. H. Rutherford, Inc., in Common Pleas Court. He alleged that a truck of the company struck his motorcycle at Forbes and Craig streets July 15 last, hurling him to the street and causing injuries of the back, arms and legs.

Gets License to Wed Same Day as Divorce

RENO, Nev., Oct. 11.—(INS.)—After divorcing Madge Hart here yesterday, Max Hart obtained a license to marry Adele F. Hoppe, also of New York.

The Harts are well known in theatrical circles in New York. In his divorce complaint Hart charged his wife had an ungovernable temper and manifested strict opposition to his work.

Injured Pedestrian Sues for $200,000

William J. White, of Pittsburgh, asked $200,000 damages for injuries when struck by an automobile, in a suit filed in Common Pleas Court against Edward T. Slater, of Washington, Pa. White averred that when he alighted from a street car at Shady and Penn avenues August 3 he was struck by Slater's automobile and suffered injuries to the spine and head.

LUCKY GIRL

CHAPTER XLII

"Life . . . the best you can hope for is life!" Mr. Allan said that. It kept echoing in Cathie's ears while they were on their way downstairs. It seemed funny, leaving the little familiar cell and riding downstairs in an elevator. A policeman with red hair and a big nose operated the elevator.

Cathie stole another look at Mr. Allan. Mr. Jesse Partington Allan, who was supposed to be such a big lawyer. Everybody said he was wonderful. He didn't look very wonderful. Just a gross fat man with a bald head, and a big stomach. . . . Talking about her getting life for nothing!

The elevator came to a stop and Cathie tossed her hair back impatiently.

"This way, Mrs. Farnsworth, please!"

The room they took her to was filled with men.

"Yes, that's her!"

Cathie jumped. A funny looking little man with walrus whiskers and a high squeaky voice like a woman's, was pointing at her excitedly. "That's her!" he cried again. "I couldn't see her face good, but that was about the build, and her hair. I'd know her hair, the way it looked in the moonlight!"

Cathie Angered

Cathie looked at the inspectors, and at Mr. Allan. Nobody said anything. They just walked her right through the room and out again into the corridor.

"Mr. Allan!"

"Yes, Mrs. Farnsworth."

"Mr. Allan, do you mean to tell me that that man I never saw before in my life identified me, and they're going to take his word for it!"

"Oh, no. We don't take anyone's word for anything. Still, it will all help to corroborate Chester Farnsworth's story. As I told you before, I don't like it—"

"Don't like it! It's the silliest thing I ever heard in my life! I never SAW the man before. Why didn't they give me a chance to talk! I'd have told him—"

Mr. Allan smiled. "That's the spirit! Get as mad as you like. Get some fight in you. Then we—"

"Why don't YOU get some fight?" Cathie flared. "Why didn't you tell him? Oh, this law—law—law—It makes me sick. Why, I'll be an old woman before they let me get up and say what really happened! Why can't I tell them . . . oh, what's the use! A perfectly strange man walking in and saying he saw me . . . saw me doing what? Shooting my husband?"

Looked From Window

Allan shook his head, but he didn't smile. "The man is an elevator operator in an apartment house out there in the Presidio Terrace district. He was walking down to the car line when he passed your house and heard the shot. He says he saw a woman stick her head out of the window—"

"Wait! Wait—I think I did. I mean I'm sure I did. I heard the shot, and I thought it was probably a tire blowing out, so I got up after a minute and went to the window—"

"Yes, but weren't you in your own room at the time?"

"Of course! And I looked out—diagonally you know, to the street, but there were no cars, and I didn't even see the man!"

"Sure you were in your room—on the side? You weren't in your husband's room?"

"No. Why, if I'd been in there . . . Mr. Allan, DON'T you believe what I'm telling you? Because if you don't there isn't any use of my trying—"

Mr. Allan wiped his bald head. "My dear girl, I'm trying to help you. Try to trust me—please."

"Yes, but that man couldn't have seen me in the front room because I wasn't there. And if he saw me in my room it helps us — my story I mean. Doesn't it?"

"It would. But unfortunately that isn't his story. He says he saw you in the FRONT room . . . so you see that's what we're up against. But don't worry. I'll take care of it, in the proper time and place . . . There . . . don't worry . . . if we never have anything worse than this to combat we'll be all right."

Asked About Chester

Presently he got up and lumbered away, but the next day he was back again, and the next and the next.

For Gordon hadn't obtained Cathie's release, and the attorneys persuaded Cathie it would be best for her not to see him, for the present at least. They were bringing pressure to bear to keep his name out of the newspaper stories. Cathie must co-operate by not asking for him now.

"Whatever you say, Mr. Allan," she said docilely.

She was acutely conscious of all that was happening now. She knew, at last, that she was going to be on trial for her life.

Allan and Gunther settled down to hard work. They questioned Cathie about Chester. Had she ever heard that he was sent away from home for a time because of a too great interest in the girl Marguerite? No, Cathie never had, but it seems that Mr. Allan found witnesses, old servants, to testify to the fact that Chester was sent away to school when he was 19 and Marguerite about 25, and the whole household was upset.

"Poor Marguerite," Cathie sighed. "But it's funny to think of her ever having cared for Chester. She hated him so toward the end. Why, she was even trying to blackmail him on account of those old stories about her mother, though she knew there was no truth in them."

"How do you know that?" Allan asked quickly.

Tells About Marguerite

"Why, he told me—Chester. It was funny, too. It was when he and Enid first came from abroad. Marguerite was sick with a cold. She kept to her bed and when I went up to talk to her Chester was in the room and she was asking him for money. He explained to me later, and told me what she meant."

"Thanks, Mrs. Farnsworth, that may be valuable. Did she ever tell you anything more, about her past life?"

"She told me she had a little baby once, that died."

"My God! Do you know when?"

"No," Cathie said. Then she remembered that long ago Mr. Farnsworth told her that Marguerite went away for a while. That must have been the time . . . "Unless it was four or five years ago. . . ."

"Is there anything else you can think of?"

Something made Cathie think of the perfume . . . that heavy, musky scent that Chester's wife and Marguerite both used. L'Ocean Vert, it was called . . .

"Thank God for that," Mr. Allan groaned.

Cathie thought of something else. "There was a beautiful gown, the bloodstained one that . . . that night. It had real lace on it. . . ."

"Oh, damn your Marguerite," he sighed. "She could testify that she hid it, all right, but she could also testify that she did it to shield you . . after all, it's just as well they haven't found her. I hope to God they never find her. She knows too much."

"But I'm innocent," Cathie reminded him gently.

"Well, I hope we can prove it," he said gloomily.

There were only four days left to prepare the case for trial.

Sunday, October 12

Sunday's horoscope holds augury of preferment, favors or recognition from employers or those in authority, with the probability of change of employment or of residence. There is hint of benefit in many directions, with finances enhanced and renewed contracts or affiliations greatly to the advantage. Tendencies to moroseness or irritability should be suppressed.

Those whose birthday it is will be in line for recognition, favors or advancement from employers or those in positions of power. This may involve change of work or environment, but all to financial profit and personal benefit. It is a propitious time for reaching out for high goals.

A child born on this day may be original, independent, ingenious and versatile, and should win the recognition of employers or those in high places. It may travel and attain to public position.

Monday, October 13

Monday's astrological forecast, although promising sufficient activity and lively situations, yet the general tenor of this action may be perilous. There is a menace of fraud, duplicity and misrepresentation both through writings and word of mouth and also there is probability of loss through speculation, gambling or other ill-advised use of funds. Litigation or personal extravagance also menace.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a lively enough year, but one beset with hazards. There is danger through fraud, trickery and misrepresentation as also through extravagance, speculation or litigation.

A child born on this day may be energetic and resourceful but prone to attain its ends by methods of expediencey rather than principle. It should be shown the dangers of personal extravagance, gambling instincts and want of probity in all its affairs.

"Honor Thy Father and Mother—"

Drawn by NELL BRINKLEY

OH POP! YOU'RE AN OLD FOGEY !!
1930.

Perhaps there is good news for Fathers and Mothers tucked "long"—but that those days may be without regret.

"Honor they Father and Mother"—not that your days may be away in the florid and trickery pages of Fashion changes. There is a whisper that good manners toward the stranger, and even toward the home folks, are coming back again.

Those of the old guard, whose "thank-yous" and "pleases" persist to the end of life, for whom getting up and giving both Father and Mother a chair when "the old ones" enter the room is as much routine manners as passing the sugar, this will be something to build bonfires over—for they miss 'em they do. They miss good manners. And good manners, even of the least, have been insolently absent from the family table of virtue for a long time.

It isn't the unlettered, and the gaudy, and the neglected boy and girl alone who's guilty; it seems to me that the higher and the thinner the upper crust the more invisible the manners become. The lady who can stare the hardest, forget the oftenest to be courteous, say the most tactless things, treat all the world in the most casual, ungraceful, informally impolite manner, is that person who occupies what in other days would have been the place of a "lady." Do you know many gracefully polite young persons these last few years? And has the social flutterer of middle-age set them very much of a mark to aim at? Non-Non—the fact is that it has been fashionable to be bad-mannered for some years, my friend.

BUT—long skirts are in. And the studious one knows that fashions in dress and manners have always had a peculiar identity. With one kind of clothes has always seemed to go a certain kind of manners. When clothes change—manners change. With extremely short clothes and Prohibition came extremely rude manners toward intimates and own families. Maybe with the passing of short frocks and the possible passing of the other arbitrary fashions that is only one of the surface will go impertinent manners too.

Maybe now that Father does not have to worry over long feminine legs draped over just anything no matter how high the object was, and Mother does not have to signal frantically across the room that eight inches ABOVE stocking-top was showing, there will be a chair offered by son or daughter and no crushing rejoinders such as this—"OH, POP—YOU'RE NOTHING BUT AN OLD FOGY!"

Good news—if true. The people who stand out today—are those whose good manners we remember—'specially to their "own."

Love's Reawakening

Continuation of Loves Awakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Fate Takes a Hand as Travelers Resume Trip

"Of course, there was no use of Ed's trying to find the fellow in that traffic," Mr. Hasbrouck went on, looking apologetically at me.

"The man surely will not trouble us now," I added with a smile, "so I think we'd better start as soon as possible."

"How's your gas, water, oil and tires?" Mr. Train asked efficiently.

"I saw to 'em all last night," Mr. Hasbrouck answered for me. "She's got plenty to last till New York."

"That's all right then," Mr. Train said. "How long do you think you folks will be? I'll bring the car around just before they're ready."

"I'll let you know," I said as I went upstairs. But secretly I decided that we would all be in the hall ready to start before I gave the word for the car to be brought out. With Philip Veritzen somewhere in the offing, I had no desire to loiter on a Kingston street. The sooner the quaint old town was behind me the better I should be pleased.

So, when I roused Lillian and Mary I asked them to get ready quickly, but not to come downstairs until they were all ready to step into the car. Then, with my own outdoor things on I went down and paid my accounting with Mr. Train and Mr. Hasbrouck, telling them nonchalantly that my friends would not be ready for several minutes yet. When they appeared almost on the heels of my words I expressed astonishment at their celerity, and Mr. Train bustled out for the car.

And then we were off, speeded by cordial smiles and hand wavings, on what I fervently hoped would be an uneventful last lap of the journey. Lillian had made no inquiry during our hasty leave-taking — she is always thoughtful not to distract anyone's attention in any time of stress—but when we were well away from the city she put the question which I knew was nearest her heart.

"Have you heard from Harry?"

"Yes." I gave her his message of love to her and his admonition to me to take care of her.

I was thankful for Mary's interrupting voice, guessed that she had seen Lillian's agitation, and purposely had struck a lighter note.

"Auntie Madge, if you don't tell me everything that's happened since we went to sleep I shall die right on this seat. Then you'll have to stop at the nearest undertaker's or the police station. That's the law, isn't it?"

"I suppose so, Mary," I laughed. "But we'll try to administer first aid before that calamity happens. I'll try to relate every detail. But it will be a halting tale. I refuse to talk in traffic."

"I don't care if the story lasts all the way to New York, just so I hear it all," she answered, and I told them of the private detective's suspicions of Mr. Hasbrouck and of the way the Catskill Mountain man and his friend, Mr. Train, with the aid of young Ed Hasbrouck, had outwitted the man in the black roadster.

"He'll go back to the hotel, of course," Lillian said. "Does Harry know about these developments?"

"Yes, he's going to watch for him there."

"That ought to give him plenty of time to deal with the sleuth hound," Harry's wife commented, and then we heard the unmistakable sound of a blow-out.

"Oh!" I groaned, but Mary's voice caroled reassurance.

"Look, Auntie Madge!" she said. "If it had to happen, where could you find a better place?"

I followed her gesturing hand and saw that we were almost opposite a garage whose door stood invitingly open. I drove my car inside at once and heard a smothered, dismayed exclamation from Mary as I did so. Then Lillian's voice said softly:

"Don't turn your head. Mary has dived under the blankets. Don't give her away. Phil Veritzen is standing over there."

Close-Ups

Cutting the top off the evening gown and adding it to the length of the skirt is just another of woman's little devices for keeping a man's eyes on her, without tiring his optic nerve.

In these days of heart-balm and alimony, the prodigal husband has to watch his step, to keep from changing roles with the fatted calf.

A man is not old until he stops trying to find a brand-new emotional thrill, and begins trying to revive his ability to feel a few of the old ones.

At last, the modern girl's hair appears to have recovered from its growing pains, passed the wild and gawky stage, and settled down primly to the age of discretion.

By the time a woman has had enough practice to learn how to kiss with the technique of a divorcee, the enthusiasm of a flapper and the discrimination of an expert, alas, her kissing days are usually over.

All those breakfast-table discussions, which make married life so dreary, would die a sudden death, if husbands would only begin the day by telling wives how sweet they are, and wives by telling husbands how wonderful they are—two statements, to which nobody ever offered an argument.

Many a man barters love, youth, enthusiasm, a good digestion and his top hair for riches—and then is chagrined to discover that they were the only things worth having, and that all his money won't buy them back, again.

You can lead the American woman to almost any foolish, NEW style; but you can't drag her back to the old ones she has been laughing at, in the family album, for twenty years.

The modern girl may flatter herself that she knows a lot more about men than her mother did; but the only girl who has no false illusions about the alibi-sex is the one who takes their office telephone calls.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

A Serious Omission

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Kindly tell me whether it is proper for a bride's parents to send the groom's family a wedding invitation. A friend of mine tells me that her husband's parents were offended because her parents did not send them (the groom's parents) an invitation when they were married.

An Admirer.

By all means the bride's parents should send the groom's parents an invitation to the wedding. As a matter of fact, this invitation is the most important one, and should be sent first. The parents of the groom are the guests of honor, and should therefore have an invitation. Every brother and sister of the groom should also be sent an invitation to the wedding, a separate invitation for each.

I think that your friend's parents-in-law would have been offended and hurt at this terrible omission. Don't you dare make that mistake!

Demi Tasse

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Please let me know whether demi tasse is served after luncheon or after dinner. I am trying to convince a friend that it is served after dinner. Betty.

Demi tasse is served either after luncheon or after dinner. The word simply means a half-cup. And a small cup of coffee you can have at any time, after supper, too, if you wish.

Hospitality

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Please tell me if it is proper to stand up and shake hands in your own home? I think it makes a person feel that he or she is welcome. Others say I am wrong. READER.

Not only is it proper for a host or hostess to rise and shake hands with a guest as he or she enters the home, but the rule of hospitality demands this. A guest who is not greeted and welcomed in this way would, I should think, wonder very much about the spirit of hospitality in that home, where it was keeping itself and how it would manifest itself.

The Bride's Veil

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

At a wedding reception, when the wedding guests are many and formally dressed, is it proper for the bride to remove her veil or to keep it on throughout the whole evening?

The bride wears her wedding veil during the reception and until she goes to change her bridal finery for her traveling costume. The hour of her glory is very short, and she should make the most of it by wearing her bridal ensemble. And there isn't any reason why she should not!

Tell It to Sally

By SALLY MARTIN

Female Stampedes Man Into Engagement

Here's one that will make you forget even Amos 'n' Andy.

Rattlesnakes, scorpions, tornadoes and tiger cats have nothing on her. And he knows it. Yet he sticks around. And unless someone dynamites him loose, he'll probably continue to stick.

For she proposed—

Took his horrid silence for consent!—

And now she's giving him the well-known stampede, right up the wedding isle.

Does he want to go? Lissen to his yelps and yowls, and judge for yourself.

"But I'm fascinated!" says he.

Well, you never can tell. I knew a guy once who ate lizards!

"Dear Miss Martin:

"I'm in a terrible jam, and I wonder if you can't help me and tell me what I should do.

"About a year and a half ago, I met a woman in rather an unconventional way, and have been keeping company with her ever since. Up to last April, she told me she would under no circumstances ever dream of marrying me. Then she had a sudden change of mind.

"She has a grown son, who supports her. And not long ago he informed her that he was keeping steady company with a girl, and intended getting married. So she forthwith proposed to me. I guess it was a case of 'Any Port in a Storm.' She fascinated me, and I let her get away with it. In fact, it was a case of her taking my silence for 'yes.' A little later she requested a ring, and I fell for that, too. Inwardly I resented her nerve, but I was spellbound.

"Now, after going with her a little more, and calmly reviewing the situation, I have been overcome by a feeling of fear, and a desire to be rid of her. She is a widow, and was divorced by a second husband some 10 years ago. He still calls on her occasionally, and she reports these calls to me with great gusto.

"But the real reason I don't want to marry her is her terrible temper. At times she appears to be the sweetest creature on earth, but she has a ferocious tongue, and when she gets angry, she pours forth her venom, not caring what she says. She is quite accustomed to having her own way, and if she doesn't get it, she resorts to vituperation and invective. I know full well that life with her would be plain hell.

"I am over 50, and after learning all these things about her, I realize that marriage with her would be impossible. For one thing, she is woefully lax and deficient in education, and is totally and entirely uninterested in improving herself in that respect. I, myself, am a widower, and was married for 25 years to the sweetest and finest woman who ever lived. The contrast between the two of them is appalling, but I don't know what to do about it.

"She keeps tab on everything I do, and when I take an occasional evening off from calling on her, she insists that I have other women, and looses more of her unbridled temper on me. In other words, she thinks she owns me, and that our wedding is a foregone conclusion. She has lately even threatened to make trouble for me at my place of employment if I don't go through with it. Of course, I realize that a lot of the blame is mine. But what recourse have I now? Would you pull up stakes and take to the tall timber, or would you stand up and face the music. It all seems like a nightmare to me.

"I possess a temper of my own, and I have had some very serious verbal encounters with her, but when things got too thick for her at these times, she would pull the cry baby act, and then I would soften and smooth things over.

"Can you help me out of my trouble? How can I withdraw from this dilemma I find myself in? I have never discussed it with anyone else, but have kept my own counsel through it all. What shall I do in this unfortunate matter?

"VERITAS."

What'll you do, Big Boy?

Stop being a Wash Rag. You got into this deplorable muddle mess just as 99 out of every 100 other people get into 'em . . . by drifting . . . letting yourself be led around by the nose.

Now, it's up to you to get out of it by squaring your shoulders, using your gumption and being yourself! Gather up the manhood that God gave you, and tell her where to get off.

Supposing she does throw fits and pull hysterics all over the office? She'll be the one who is shown up . . . not you. And she can't marry you unless you let her! And from what you say, nothing she could do to you could be half so bad as having to live with her. So stop backing and filling, and stand up for yourself. It's a cinch that no one else is going to do it for you.

Am I right, boys?

How would you treat grabby ladies like that?

CRITICS VIEW FILMS; HOLLYWOOD AND GOTHAM NEWS

SIDEWALKS —of— PITTSBURGH

By William Pfarr

Some 25 years ago John Mellor published an expose of a doll contest in his paper, The Record. It seems that the daughter of the brewery driver who hauled beer to the countless saloons in Lawrenceville had won the doll but Mr. Mellor suspected dirty work at the crossroads. He learned that the brewery driver had bought up huge blocks of votes after the contest had closed and had managed to have them counted for his offspring. Well, the real winner was an innocent little girl named Peggy and when Mr. Mellor learned the facts he opened wide the columns of his paper to the truth and nothing but the truth. Peggy never did get the doll but Mr. Mellor did have his expose.

William Pfarr

Mr. Mellor and The Record were always doing things like that. The Record was published from 1893 to 1914 for the residenters of Lawrenceville (the old Eighteenth Ward), and it would bite you if you didn't watch out. Mr. Mellor hasn't changed much; today he is in the neighborhood of the seventies, clear-eyed, vigorous, and assertive. In the valedictory of his paper he wrote: "My enemies contributed far more towards my success than my friends."

* * *

You could never depend on what Mr. Mellor might print. In 1908, for instance, we find him contending that some diseases had their benefits. If you recover from typhoid fever, Editor Mellor revealed, you not only had a new stomach but a better stomach. It is not of record that Lawrenceville enjoyed an epidemic of typhoid in that year.

Y'SAY EVERYTHING WE HAVE SIR ?
YEP—JUST GOT OVER TYPHOID !

A close friend of Mr. Mellor was John Turner, the merchant. And if you were of Lawrenceville in those years you will recall that never an issue of the Mellor weekly went to press without the reassuring line: "Don't forget, John Turner's blankets will keep you warm."

No such friend was Sarah Bernhardt or the firemen at No. 9 Engine Company. It was in 1913, when Bernhardt held the respect of the world, that Mr. Mellor, from a tiny office in Lawrenceville, took his pot-shot at her. He wrote that so thin was the great actress that one day in Paris an empty taxicab drew up to a hotel and out stepped Sarah Bernhardt.

The firemen at No. 9 never had much liking for Mr. Mellor after a certain issue of The Record had reached the streets. All that he had written was that some celebration should be made of the firemen finally having reached a fire on time. He added that the captain enjoyed scaring the horses.

We do not know whether Editor Mellor was sarcastic, sincere or joking when, under the heading "HAMPTON CAPTURES A COW" he suggested that Policeman Hampton, having subdued a runaway cow in Allegheny Cemetery, deserved a Carnegie Hero medal.

Neither do we know what happened after Mr. Mellor had devoted a portion of his front page to this entertaining item straight from his own pen:

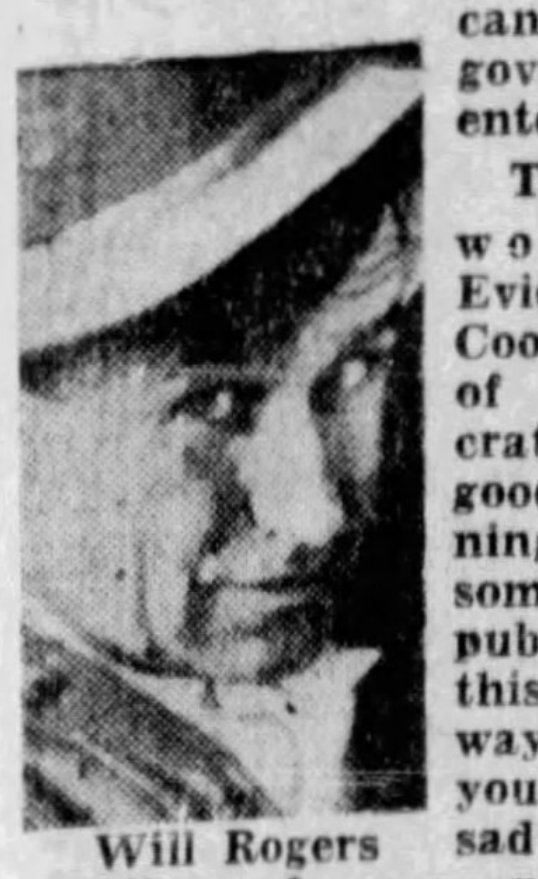
"Say! Pike this off, will you? Here we have a school director in the Eighteenth Ward who thinks he is capable of bossing 45 school teachers and looking after the education of 2,000 school children and yet he cannot control his own household; he cannot get along with his own wife, and they have to live apart. Is this not enough to drive any taxpayer to the black bottle?"

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Oct. 11.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

Mr. Coolidge said Thursday that some people are supporting candidates because they are good fellows, and that it's vain to elect office-seekers who smile, as you can't run the government on entertainment.



Will Rogers

Them's harsh words, Calvin. Evidently Mr. Coolidge knows of some Democrats who are good fellows running against some sad Republicans, and this is his sly way of asking you to vote for a sad-faced Republican, for any man that can smile nowadays must be a Democrat, or a half-wit, or perhaps both. Being serious, or being a good fellow has got nothing to do with running this country. If the breaks are with you, you could be a laughing hyena and still have a great administration. Yours,

WILL.

Ernest Torrence's Secret Is Out; He's Composer As Well as Actor

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1930, Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 11.

A little known talent of Ernest Torrence comes to light with the news that John McCormack will sing two of the actor's songs on the concert stage this year.

Torrence received a cablegram from the Irish singer while on location for "Fighting Caravans." It requested copies of the songs "Machree" and "God Gave Me Flowers." They now are on their way to McCormack at Moore Abbey, Monasterevan, Ireland.

Ernest Torrence

Torrence is an accomplished pianist and has composed many songs. These chosen by McCormack were written within the last two years.

DRAMATIC LICENSE

"Is Fox breeding a race of supermen?" inquires T. E. W. "In the 'Last of the Duanes,' George O'Brien ducked a bullet, and, in 'The Big Trail,' John Wayne threw a knife about 100 yards to kill a man. The victim wore a heavy coat and there was a blinding snowstorm at the time."

Why be such an old meanie? Haven't you ever heard of dramatic license?

ON HER OWN

Ann Haines, sister of William Haines, the M. G. M. star, is the hostess of a famous Hollywood fashion atelier. She tired of the social round in the film colony and decided to go to work. Previous to her present occupation, she worked in one picture with Bill.

IN OAKIE'S FILM

Jack Oakie

Opposite Jack will be Jean Arthur, who has been the heroine of many Paramount thrillers.

One of the gangsters will be played by William Boyd, late of Broadway. Since "The Spoilers," Boyd has been in demand as a heavy.

Injured Section Hand Asks $75,000

Estey W. Buterbaugh, of Mahaffey, Clearfield County, filed a suit in Federal Court against the New York Central Railroad Company, seeking $75,000 damages for injuries. His bill of complaint says he was working for the railroad company as a section hand at the Wetzel Bridge, between Clearfield and Cherrytree, on September 17, 1929, when he was struck by a train and hurled 42 feet to the railroad bridge below the Wetzel span.

Buterbaugh charged the railroad company with negligence for failing to have a man posted to warn workmen of approaching trains.

HERO FARRELL RIDES TRAIN TO HEAVEN IN THE WARNER

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

The movies have handed out modern versions of about everything of this world and now they take us to Heaven. And it's no crude Little Eva flight. It is a grand ride in a de luxe railroad train. The movie Gabriel, looking like some hick postmaster, toots his horn and away you go.

This all comes as part of "Liliom," screen version of the Franz Molnar play, which opened yesterday in the Warner.

The production is literally a movie Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde. It is a picture with two souls. One is the somber beauty of earthly life. The other is the confusing allegory of flighty imagination. When it keeps to reality and earth, the film is impressive. When it flies into allegorical clouds, it becomes a farce.

DEATH CATCHES UP!

The story is that of the romance between a merry-go-round barker and a servant girl. It is a melancholy sort of romance. But there is a tragic beauty about it. This boy! He is a boastful ne'er-do-well. He is a dreamer. He is trying to escape from himself. This girl! She is lost in love. She is trying to "find" her sweetheart.

Fate intervenes in the form of a tempter, a thief. The boy sees the railroad track sweep away into the distance and he dreams of a far-away land. And the thief whispers in his ear: I'll show you the way. So they stage a holdup, the thief and the boy. But they are thwarted. The police come. And in an attempted getaway, the boy eludes the police by letting Pale Death catch up with him.

ALL ABOARD!

However, he gets his train ride after all, this boy, as the allegorical phase of the picture is introduced. He goes thundering off toward Heaven. Then, somewhere in the clouds, he changes trains and goes thundering down to Hell.

Charles Farrell gives a satisfactory portrayal as the boy. Rose Hobart plays the girl with deep restraint and impressive sincerity. And H. B. Warner is prominent in the allegorical sequences. He is some sort of heavenly magistrate.

"Liliom" could have been; in fact, should have been, a great picture. But it isn't. However, it is a great improvement on Little Eva's trip to Heaven.

90-Year-Old Hunter Gets Season License

By GEORGE SEIBEL

IT IS NOT OFTEN that the title of a picture tells the story so adequately as "Three French Girls," whose droll allurements and rapid fire parlez-vooing, not to mention their lingerie tickled the audiences at the Penn yesterday.

George Seibel

They are Fifi d'Orsay, Yola d'Avril and Sandra Ravel—and of course, Fifi is the demurest, daintiest, and most de-lee-cious of the lot. They land in jail with Reginald Denny, who has incited them to rain flower pots on the head of a landlord who wants to collect his rent. Here they are joined by two low-comedy Yankees, and escape after turning the hoosegow into a madhouse.

MORE OF THE SAME

On their way to Paris they lodge in a stable, where the gentle kine and the docile mule are shocked by such human antics. And in Paris they finally swing an Apache dance into a free-for-all that is hilarious as can be, drive an auto into the reception room of a palace, and reverse a wedding so that the dashing Reginald marries the languorous and volatile Fifi.

Nobody appears to be the least bit sane, but everything is riotously funny. The dialogue stenciled by Wodehouse, is especially amusing. The gowns, what there is of them, are ravissante. Altogether it is pleasant to take—farce that avoids vulgarity and romance with a wild wink.

EDEN WITH ONE ADAM

The stage show presents the "Melody Maidens," an Eden of music and dance in which Alex Hyde is the lonely Adam. Those maidens can do anything—adagio dancing that would scare a contortionist, or playing Tchaikowsky's "1812" overture while cannons boom, bells toll, and the Czar collects fire insurance on the Kremlin.

Yes, those Melody Maidens made melody that kept David Pesetzki worried. But he and his orchestra played Oscar Strauss, and the other Oscar played Victor Herbert, so as to keep up their musical standing.

SHERIDAN SCREEN HAS TUNE PICTURE

"Monte Carlo," now showing in the Sheridan Square starring Jeannette McDonald and Jack Buchanan is a farce, set to melodious theme songs. In it we find the plot of the lover who disguises his identity in order to be near his lady love. There are boudoir scenes which are perfect, set off by Miss McDonald in gorgeous negligees, one mor splendid than the other. Perhaps the most amusing scene of all is the "hair dressing scene" just before the opera.

A count, incognito, Jack Buchanan, prepares the audience for each laugh by the twinkle in his eyes. His sense of humor is immediately contagious.

The play within the play is a bit of clever technique that is very successfully carried out. At the conclusion of the picture, we agree with the Count—in that we "like happy endings."

Camera Question Box

The Sun-Telegraph's "Camera Question Box" each day will ask a question of public interest to Pittsburghers, and will photograph those interviewed.

Today's question: Miss Olive Smith, of the Amos Parrish organization, says: "This is the season for sellers." What do you think?

Mr. Baker.

C. V. BAKER, South Hills, chief engineer: This is a good season to sell, if a person can sell; if he can find anyone who will buy. On the whole, though, I I believe that all kinds of business conditions are picking up.

Mrs. Julia Summers, Squirrel Hill, pianist: All through the summer months, people are too much interested in their vacations to think much about buying or selling. Now, that fall is here again, I believe that the time for sales is once more at hand.

Mrs. Summers.

Mr. Wyke.

F. Wyke, bellboy: When school opens, it seems to be the season for sales to begin. In the summer time the sales business seems to be at a standstill, but with the school spirit seems to come the sales spirit. I think Miss Smith is right.

Miss Siepmann.

Miss Juliana Siepmann, McKees Rocks, bookkeeper: This season things should pick up in a business way. As a new season is opening, so is there a demand for new material.

William S. Wolf, Cleveland, vice president and sales manager: No, this is not a season for sellers; it is a buyer's market. In a business depression, such as we are going through, buyers have control over sellers. Most firms are willing to give things away.

Mr. Wolf.

Mr. Napier.

A. S. Napier, Aspinwall, maintenance manager: With the drop in prices that is so evident, I believe that it is a better season for the buyer than for the seller. Of course, one has its influence on the other.

WALTER WINCHELL On Broadway

Thanks for the Ad, Ted

(From Ted Robinson's Col'm in the Cleveland Plain Dealer)

According to a statement made by Walter—
A frail and her b. f. were on the merge;
They clinched and then they ankled up an altar,
Were sealed and after that were on the verge.

However, he looked That Way at another,
Forgetting for the time, at least, his heart;
They phfft!—the gal returned at once to mother;
According to the rags, they're still apart.

They'll tell it to the Judge with proper speakers—
And Reno-vate it if he will allow;
I recommend this to diversion seekers
Among the Things I Never Knew Till Now.
—Van H. Eshelman.

Why, Mrs. Gilhooley!

Helen Hayes, the femme star of Jed Harris' "Mr. Gilhooley" show, was more caustic than was first supposed in her chat over the air the other Sabbath eve.

Among other pot-shots at the critics (all of whom superlatived her) Helen objected to a critic "who likes to use big words and takes up two columns of space to say what could be said in two paragraphs."

"He reminds me of Houdini," Miss Hayes also said, "trying to get out of the dictionary."

A Form of Criticism

As if we didn't know.

Gag

Joel J. Levenson, of Worcester, Mass., offers you this eavesdropped pattern:

"Nu, Yussel, hows business?"

"Even the pipple who dun't intend to pay are not buying."

Things That Burn Me Up And Knock Me Cold

One of the critics covering the new "Brown Buddies" show said, among other things, that Bill Robinson was "indifferent" and that Bill wouldn't appear with the rest of the troupe during the finale. Robinson, as you probably read, was shot by an excited policeman in Pittsburgh, where the show played last week. He refused to disappoint the management, the cast and the public, and appeared Tuesday eve'g as scheduled. He suffered great agony, they say, doing his various routines, and the reason Bill didn't appear in the finale was that he collapsed in the wings.

The Plot Thickens

According to Willard Keefe, two actors paused to read the headlines in the newspapers at a 47th Street newsstand. One headline shrieked:

"Crater Vault Empty!"

The Morning Mail

"My dear Winchell," replies Dr. Vizetelly, of the Funk & Wagnall Dictionary Company, "away back in 1807 the great Washington Irving made use of the phrase 'in a fit of the blues' in his "Salmagundi.' The reference to Barham's 'Ingoldsby Legends' that you printed I cannot verify for lack of the book. But for desperation of spirits and despondency as 'the blues,' we must look back about 400 years when 'blue' acquired the significance of 'desperation, discouragement, dismay and low-spiritedness' . . . To 'look blue' dates back to the time of the Robin Hood ballads, which Ritsen printed. Of conditions in England in 1840, Disraeli wrote to his sister of 'the great panic that exists here, and even the knowing ones look pale and blue.' Burns had a 'fit of the blue devils' in 1798. The great Thomas Jefferson acknowledged having 'something of the blue devils at times' in 1810, and in 1823 Byron ran the 'blue devils' in his 'Don Juan'!

" 'The six days smoothly run
The seventh will bring blue devils or a nun' "

Capsule Opinion

The closing of Arthur Hammerstein's costly musical show, "Luana," prompted Bugs Baer to chirp:

"The trouble with 'Luana' is that they didn't make the cast smaller and the volcano in the last act bigger!"

The Idea Splendid

Some of us who broadcast via the air waves and have to submit our speeches to the officials of the station are bored with them. Because, perhaps at the last moment, they invariably delete this and that, and when pressed for a reason, the officials offer That Blank Stare.

The other night we told Alexander Woollcott, also an air fiend, about it.

"It is most irritating," we groaned, "how do you get around it?"

"I merely send them 10 typewritten pages of last Sunday's Times," said Mr. Woollcott, "and they never know the difference."

Self-Indictment

The papers appear to be packed with quarrels between managers, actors, actresses and critics, which is as it should be—to make something in the profession interesting. One of the bitter feuds was that between Woollcott, when he was a reviewer, and Lowell Sherman, alleged actor.

The tiff was one-sided, of course, considering that Woollcott has the sharpest pencil and a nimble mind. It all became quite dull after a time, however, and the critic decided to close the matter.

Which was accomplished by publishing a letter of indignation from Sherman—so hammy in tone it immediately swung all doubtful voters over to the critic.

Titter

Heheheh

Mr. Al Katz, whose orchestra has opened an engagement at the Hollywood, wishes to announce that he has just outfitted his trombone and cornets with a complete line of new fall hats.

MR. KEATON PUTS FUN AND WAR IN ENRIGHT

By HOWARD L. BROWNING, JR.

The Enright Theater puts on a swell show this week.

Buster Keaton headlines with his production "Doughboys," holding the lead for himself. With Sally Eilers as the girl friend and Cliff Edwards as a comical guardian angel, war is funny; shell fire, manna from heaven; No-Man's Land, an Alice's Wonderland; discipline, a step-mother and the enemy, playmates.

Keaton is Elmer J. Stuyvesant, Jr., partner of his father, Elmer J. Stuyvesant, retired business man. And Sally is just a shop girl, too proud to be picked up by Elmer, who, though dumb, is persistent.

The war breaks out. Keaton goes to an employment bureau to find a chauffeur; but, unwittingly, he enters a recruiting station, is enlisted in spite of himself. And Sally is found to be a hostess at his training camp.

ULRIC AND SALE IN NEW PROGRAMS

Lenore Ulric comes to the Nixon stage Monday in a new play by William Du Bois, entitled "The Pagan Lady." There will be the usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees.

Chic Sale, author of "The Specialist," comes to the Shubert-Alvin Theater on Monday evening, opening an engagement of one week only, as the star of a musical comedy, "Hello, Paris."

The final presentations of "Elizabeth Sleeps Out" by the George Sharp Players in the Pitt are today's matinee and evening performances.

The second attraction in the Fulton, Sixth street, will be Ernst Lubitsch's production for Paramount, "Monte Carlo," with Jack Buchanan and Jeannette MacDonald. It opens today. In it are songs by Buchanan, Miss MacDonald and Claude Allister.

Jack Dempsey's former stage production, "The Big Fight," opens on the Harris screen today with Guin Williams, Lola Lane and Stepin Fetchit in the leading roles.

ARLEN TENDS SHEEP, GETS GIRL IN ALDINE

By MILDRED FILLMORE

Richard Arlen is the star man in "The Santa Fe Trail," the new screen feature in the Aldine. He's a sheep herder, who falls in love with a Spanish senorita and saves her father's rancho from tumbling into the hands of the villain.

There are a lot of sheep, Indians and gun-toting gentlemen in the picture. And the inevitable fiesta is staged, too. This gives the fair heroine, portrayed by Rosita Moreno (there's a new face to us) a chance to do a dance and do a song. It also allows Mr. Arlen to strut his romantic stuff in that junior-prom manner of his.

The youngsters, Mitzi Green and Junior Durkin, inject the awkward age complex. They are a little too clever for such an obvious pair of kids.

"Who Killed Rover," one of those short comedies, with an all-dog cast, gets a lot of laughs. The antics of the bow-wow performers are accompanied by human voices. There is a wedding and a pursuing villain. And this dog-burlesque on the oldtime melodramas ends like no other melodrama ever ended. The rescue doesn't come in the nick of time and the hero dies like a dog!

Leaders Bold During Boom Now Shirking

—By B. C. FORBES—

B. C. Forbes

THE PUBLIC are expressing increasing dissatisfaction over the failure of those who control our great financial institutions and firms to step forward and make an earnest effort to have idle millions of money put to work. Inaction is giving the impression of impotency. Here is one of the many angles criticism takes.

"Certain bankers in New York and other cities evidently thought themselves better qualified than anybody else to run huge institutions. They showed what they thought of themselves by gobbling up other banks. They showed that they had great faith in themselves and in their own ability as did others who formed billion-dollar combinations.

"But what faith or what ability are they showing now? They have turned out to be only fair-weather 'leaders.' They were very bold and brave when everything was booming. But what have these same consolidation-makers done to prove that they had any right to put other bankers out of business?

"The biggest of them have not turned a hand, so far as the public know, to stop the spread of trouble. All they have done has been to look on. Their banks are stuffed with money.

"Can't these same fellows who got control of the biggest banks in big cities get together and put a stop to what has been going on? Can't they do something to prove that they were the right men to reach out for control of other banks?

"If they haven't enough money in their own banks to do helpful things with, they could get plenty more from the Federal Reserve banks, seeing that these Federal Reserve banks have hoarded up reserves of almost twice what the law requires them to carry."

DR. SCHACHT, former dynamic head of the German government bank, now visiting America, has expressed similar criticism of our bank leaders' weak-kneed inactivity.

Unless our foremost financiers and bank heads do something to prove to the public that they are exerting themselves to the utmost to raise the country out of the slough of despond, there is danger that the public's attitude will become very hostile and seek to find ways and means of having their hostility expressed in the form of legislation. Foreign countries are not the only ones where unrest is growing.

After all, aren't the public justified in expecting leaders to lead? Never was there greater opportunity for the exhibition of effective leadership.

One comment often heard is, "If old J. P. Morgan had been alive, he wouldn't have let the bears have things all their own way for so long. He would have brought the principal bankers of the city and of the country together and done something to check demoralization. He was a big man. Haven't we any big men, or even one big man, today fit at least to try to follow in his footsteps?"

Not much is expected from a $1,000-a-year man or a $5,000-a-year man, but something is expected of $100,000 and $500,000-a-year men. The public feel very strongly that they are getting nothing from the $100,000 and $500,000 men.

'Tis said, "The opportunity oft begets the man." The opportunity is here. Where is the man?

J. H. NEWMARK, after commenting on recent statements appearing in this column, writes: "What we need to do is to impress millions with the thought, 'Buy something today.' If that were done and people were sufficiently impressed to put it in practice, we should see a change in a very short time."

"This shows the depletion of inventories: I called up a haberdasher having a number of places of business in Greater New York and told the salesman that I wanted to order six shirts of plain white madras, or white madras with a small white figure. He answered, 'The only white shirts we have in stock are broadcloth.' Here was a store, usually carrying a variety of white shirts, reduced in stock to one class of material."

J. H. HARGREAVES, suggests: "If we could induce people to promise themselves to spend one of two days' pay for something they really need on a certain date, and they knew definite results would be shown because thousands of other people would be doing the same thing, I am sure there would be a wholehearted response. Why not try to get newspapers, bankers, broadcasting systems, retail and manufacturing organizations and others to push the idea? Here is a slogan for the campaign: 'Don't hoard. Buy something you need.'"

PRESIDENT WYLIE HEMPHILL of the Seattle Chamber of Commerce wires this column: "As a good example to its neighbors and as an indication that it is not downhearted but on the contrary up and coming, Seattle, exactly on time, went over the top in its community fund campaign, raising $741,000."

THE STOCK MARKET will turn upon its attackers one of these days.

GENERAL TRADE GAINS IN WEEK

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—Business conditions during the week ended October 4, 1930, as measured by bank debits, outside New York City, registered a marked gain over the week of September 27, 1930, but declined from the corresponding week in 1929.

Wholesale prices as indicated by the index of 120 commodities showed a fractional change from the preceding week and were below the level of a year ago. Iron and steel prices remained at the same level as the preceding week and like other wholesale prices were lower than in 1929. The price for middling cotton at New York showed a slight increase and red winter wheat at Kansas City a slight decrease when contrasted with a week ago. Both prices were lower than for the same week a year ago.

Bank loans and discounts of Federal Reserve member banks for the latest week recorded a slight gain over a week ago and were only slightly below their total of a year ago. The average prices of 50 representative railroad and industrial stocks declined from the prices of the week ended September 27, while bond prices remained unchanged. Stock prices were lower and bond prices higher than a year ago. Time money rates were lower while call rates showed no change from the preceding week. Business failures during the past week were less numerous than a week ago.

For the week ended September 27, 1930, increases occurred over the preceding period in bituminous coal production and hog receipts at primary markets. Declines during this period occurred in petroleum and lumber production, wheat and cattle receipts. The activity of steel mills showed no change from the week ended September 20.

Northwestern Gets Approval on Bonds

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—Chicago & Northwestern Railway has been authorized by the Interstate Commerce Commission to issue $12,000,000 of first and refunding mortgage gold bonds, Series C, to be sold at not less than 97½ per cent of par and accrued interest, and proceeds used to reimburse the road's treasury for capital expenditures.

LOCAL SCHOOL ADDS NEW CLASSES

Increased Enrollment Necessitates Taking Of More Floor Space

The growth of the Grace Martin's School has necessitated taking additional classroom space, October 6, more than half of the ninth floor of the Keenan Building was opened, in addition to the classrooms on the eighteenth floor. The new rooms are arranged for lectures, advanced secretarial practice, beginning secretarial accountancy and shorthand.

Up to within a few years ago an average stenographic training was sufficient for a secretary, but with the growth of business and the consequent demands, there is an imperative need of the well-prepared secretary with practical training. The young business woman as well as the experienced business woman has realized that she must not stay in the mediocre stenographic class if she wishes to hold her place in business as a private secretary.

The enrollment for evening classes October 6, was much larger than anticipated. The classes have been scheduled into two schools. One 5:30 to 7:30, and the other 7:30 to 9:30. Aside from the regular subjects of Gregg shorthand, bookkeeping, secretrial English, business correspondence, business English and typing, two other very interesting classes have been organized: Graham shorthand, under the expert supervision of Miss Julia E. Thomas, and Spanish, with Mrs. Maria G. Corriols as teacher.

The first of a series of social activities to be given by the class of 1930, will be a get-together party and luncheon, Wednesday, October 22, at 1:15 in the Fort Pitt Hotel. Dr. Wallace C. Petty will give the talk. Miss Ruth E. Agar is chairman in charge of the committee organizing the Business Women's Club of the Grace Martin's School.

SMALLER CORN CROP SEEN

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—This year's corn crop, heavily curtailed by the drought, was indicated by the Department of Agriculture on the basis of October 1 conditions at 2,046,716,000 bushels, as compared with a production of 2,614,307,000 bushels last year.

Last month, 1,982,765,000 bushels of corn were indicated, two months ago, 2,212,000,000 bushels and three months ago 2,802,000,000 bushels disclosing the effects of the drought on the growing crop as the summer advanced.

The country's wheat crop, less affected by the drought, was placed at 839,612,000 bushels, as compared with 837,761,000 bushels indicated a month ago and 806,000,000 bushels produced last year.

Canadian Wheat Hurt by Weather

WINNIPEG, Oct. 11.—With perhaps 82 per cent of the estimated 380,000,000-bushel wheat crop of Western Canada threshed, approximately 68,000,000 bushels have been caught in the recent severe break in the weather. While reports are still guarded as to the extent of damage done to this 18 per cent of the crop it is believed much of it will be a total loss and that the sample will be permanently injured.

Asociated Gas Co.'s Production Gains

Electric output of Associated Gas and Electric Company for September amounted to 265,148,415 k.w.h., an increase of 2,026,129 k.w.h. or slightly less than 1 per cent over September, 1929. This increase compares favorably with August, which showed a decrease of 1,813,840 k.w.h.

Gas output was 14,350,985 cubic feet, a decrease of 92,214 cubic feet or 6-10 of 1 per cent, which is also an improvement over August.

WINDOW GLASS SALES SHOW GAIN

The placing of orders for window glass with manufacturers showed a slight improvement during the week, according to National Glass Budget. A gain was also apparent with the jobbers and dealers. The improvement was not equal to the increase in volume of business apparent at the first of the final quarter in other years. The general expectancy is that there will be a further gain in the amount of glass moved by all interests during the next 60 days. Further than that it is problematical what the situation will be.

It is apparent now that the year will close with less window glass in the hands of all interests than perhaps for the last quarter of a century. It might, therefore, be advisable for jobbers and dealers to carefully consider their requirements for the remainder of the year and maintain at least a stock sufficient in quantity to take care of immediate business. Demand now exceeds factory output and the manufacturers' stocks are being reduced. Production is extremely low, with market conditions just about as they have been for some weeks past.

SMALL PLATE DEMAND

The rough rolled and wired glass situations continue as they have been running recently. As is to be expected in October, there is some improvement in the volume of business placed with the manufacturers. Production is slightly higher, but nevertheless materially below the amount manufactured at the beginning of October in former years. Little change is reported in market conditions.

Affairs in the plate glass industry are extremely quiet. During September the jobbing and mirror manufacturing trades showed signs of activity, but apparently the log of business in the two branches mentioned was not sufficient to maintain the improvement in ordering. During the past 10 days of this month demand for plate did not show the seasonable average of increase over a very dull summer that was natural to expect. There has not been any increase in operating capacity reported. The market is holding up very well in the face of a small demand.

FAMILY LOANS TOTAL HIGH

More than $500,000,000 is loaned annually to millions of families throughout the country, according to A. H. Thale, local manager of the Household Finance Corporation. Sickness and unemployment cause a majority of the families of moderate income to run into extraordinary debt at least once every three years, he further contends. These family financial depressions occur without regard to the business cycle and should not be the cause of any embarrassment.

According to Mr. Thale's report, individual indebtedness in most cases is not enough to cause family disaster where the yearly income is between $1,200 and $3,000 and the amount of money needed does not exceed one or two months' wages.

STEEL OUTPUT LOW DURING SEPT.

Statistics Fail to Reveal Recession Is Passing; Car Loadings Index

By R. E. V. LUTY.

Production of Bessemer and open-hearth steel ingots in September is reported by the American Iron and Steel Institute at 2,867,978 tons, against 3,095,293 tons in August and 2,933,399 tons in July. Thus the official statistics show September to have been the low month of the year by a margin of 2.2 per cent, July having previously occupied that position. August was about 7 per cent above the average of July and September combined.

These comparisons are technically accurate for the tonnages reported are substanstilly correct, individual reports being received from producers who represent about 95 per cent of the total capacity, the remainder being prorated by the institute. By the steel mill calendar each of the three months had 26 working days, as Sundays are excluded and Independence Day but not Labor Day, and thus the monthly totals represent variations in rates per working day. Practically, however, when the object is to observe the rate at which consumers have been calling for steel, some allowances should be made. From that viewpoint the August showing was fictitiously high and there was correspondingly little decrease to September.

TRADE UNCERTAINTY

In view of uncertainty as to duration of decline in trade activity trends have been studied lately with particular interest and fine distinctions are worth while. Industrial activity reached the peak of a special bulge in June of last year, recession then beginning. From October to November the recession passed the average or trend line, thus developing into a depression. The more important statistics have thus far failed to show that the recession has been arrested. Freight car loadings are commonly regarded as the best single index of general character. To allow for seasonal variation, car loadings in various periods this year may be compared with five-year averages in the same periods. The first nine weeks of this year showed 6.05 per cent decrease, and the decreases continued to increase until the four weeks through September 6 showed 14.62 per cent decrease, while the three weeks through September 27 show 16.16 per cent decrease and the last week of these three had the largest decrease.

Steel production in September may be considered in the light of this showing. In an ordinary or typical year September has a seasonal increase over July. This year there was technically a 2.2 per cent decrease from July to September and even if that could be explained away there would still be left the absence of seasonal increase, which is attributable to general trade having lost ground July to September.

RELATIVE SHOWING

During the last three months steel has been doing well enough relative to trade in general, but it makes a poor comparison with the first half of the year, when total ingot production was fully 24,000,000 tons, while the third quarter totaled only 9,000,000 tons and the fourth quarter is practically certain to run more than 5 per cent under the third. There is 25 to 30 per cent decrease from first half to second half, when in ordinary years seasonal decrease is only 5 to 10 per cent.

The Steel Corporation's statement of unfilled obligations throws no clear light on the situation or trend. By the superficial comparison the September loss of 155,866 tons is favorable because August had shown 441,851 tons decrease, but the general view is that the corporation canceled many old contracts. By comparison with September of previous years the report for last month is unfavorable. In 1923 September showed a decrease, but in each of the next six years there was an increase except for a small loss in 1927. Neither is this showing conclusive for generally in other years September had the help of annual rail contracting, which did not produce much early tonnage of actual production. Apparently there was less fourth-quarter contracting for various finished products than had been hoped.

Guaranty Trust Gets Detroit Note Issue

DETROIT, Oct. 11.—The Guaranty Company of New York was awarded $15,000,000 City of Detroit short term notes.

ROBERT P. ROBERTSON

E. RAY STITELER

OFFICIALS HAVE VIVID CAREERS

Two of the officials of the Bletcher-Anchors Company, job printing establishment, have had vivid business careers. They are Robert P. Robertson, president and production manager, and E. Ray Stiteler, secretary and sales manager.

A graduate of the School of Printing in Edinburg, Scotland, Mr. Robertson came to this country in 1903. Starting with the Bletcher-Anchors firm in 1921 as composing room foreman, he was successively promoted until today he is president and production manager.

Stiteler is a graduate of Gettysburg College. He gained his printing experience while working in Augusta, Ga. Joining the Bletcher-Anchors staff in 1923, he has made rapid progress and today is secretary and sales manager, and a member of the board of directors.

Eight Fires Burn In Forbes Forest

County Puts Auto Death Liability Up to State

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Oct. 11.—An affidavit of defense raising a question of law has been filed on behalf of the Greene County commissioners in reply to a $40,000 trespass suit brought against the county by Mrs. Helen Jakobowski as the result of the death of her husband, Joseph Jakobowski, in an automobile accident on state highway route 451 near Greensboro, June 22. The county claims the state is responsible for safety of the traveling public on state routes.

Investment Men Leave For New Orleans

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

LAST NIGHT OVER 1,000 executives of security houses boarded trains bound for the Investment Bankers' Association convention which will assemble at New Orleans on Sunday.

Special trains from New York, Detroit, Chicago and St. Louis are carrying the delegates from the principal financial centers to the four-day series of meetings at which the radically changed condition of the stock and bond markets will be discussed. While the reports of committees always throw an interesting light on changing investment trends, the informal discussions taking place on the trains frequently give the most enlightening picture of the financial condition of the country.

Most of the Pittsburgh representatives at the convention boarded the Detroit special train at Cincinnati this morning. The train will make a three-hour stop at Chattanooga where the association members will be entertained by the Chamber of Commerce.

Pittsburgh Delegates

AMONG THE PITTSBURGHERS who have made reservations for the convention are George G. Applegate, J. Howard Arthur, Jos. M. Scribner, Kenneth Crane, Harrison Thomas and M. M. Grubbs.

The work of the convention will start on Sunday morning with meetings of committees and the board of governors preliminary to the general sessions. Departing from and old custom the committee meetings will be open to all members. In the past the deliberations on individual phases of the business were conducted behind closed doors and only the final reports were available to members.

On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday the reports of committees will be discussed at the general sessions of the convention.

Strawn to Speak

ONE OF THE PRINCIPAL speakers will be Silas H. Strawn, of Chicago. During Chicago's recent financial crisis, Strawn was chairman of the citizens' committee which obtained over $74,000,000 to tide the municipal government over a period during which customary bank loans could not be obtained.

He was president of the American Bar Association in 1927-28. Since 1921 he has been chairman of the board of Montgomery Ward & Co., and is on the boards of several other leading corporations. As chairman of the American committee of the International Chamber of Commerce he served as delegate to the meetings of that body at Rome in 1923, at Stockholm in 1927 and at Amsterdam in 1929.

Eugene R. Black

THE CONVENTION will also be addressed by Eugene R. Black, governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta. The vital relationship of investment security houses to the activities of the Federal Reserve System will make this one of the most interesting talks to most of the delegates.

The program will be brought to a close on Wednesday with the installation of new officers for the coming year.

TEXAS OUTPUT INCREASED

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—Improvements and economies authorized by Freeport Texas Company about four months ago have been completed and have resulted in an increase of 30 per cent in the productive capacity of its Hoskins Mound plant, near Freeport, Tex. This has necessitated the opening up of a large new area on the company's sulphur properties, which has been found to contain richer deposist than original test indicated, officials of the company announced today.

The improvements consist of more efficient methods of treating water supply, the use of flue gases for pre-heating mine water and various other engineering economies recommended by the company's engineering and research department.

Domestic demand for sulphur continues to hold up in excess of last year, and foreign orders are showing gradual improvement, Eugene L. Norton, president, stated. The industry as a whole has not been affected to the same extent as general business, he added, owing to a constantly widening industrial use for sulphur, which should be further stimulated by a resumption of general business activity.

Cadillac September Output 3,496 Units

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—September production of the Cadillac Motor Company totaled 3,496 cars, compared with 3,535 cars in August, which was the largest month so far this year. Actual orders on hand for deliveries to foreign countries, it was reported, will make October the largest month this year for Cadillac export business.

Race Horse Owner Falls Dead at Home

BUSINESS INDEX SLIPS LOWER

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—The beginning of the fourth quarter shows no quickening in the business tempo other than a moderate expansion of retail trade under the usual stimulus of seasonal influences and low prices, says the Business Week in its report covering the week ending today.

Such expansion is characteristic of poor as well as good years and gives no special indication that real recovery this year is under way.

That industrial activity still lags behind even seasonal expectations is shown in the fact that the business index declined slightly from 86.4 per cent to 86.3 per cent of normal for the week ending October 4, as against 108.0 per cent in the corresponding week a year ago. This disappointment, however, is tempered by the knowledge that the volume of consumption is still fairly well maintained and that shelves are gradually being cleared.

A belated seasonal expansion in commercial borrowing and currency circulation, together with a relative improvement in residential building are brighter spots in the general gloom.

Amerian Smelting Cuts Lead Again

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—The American Smelting and Refining Company has reduced the price of lead 5 points to 5.10 cents a pound.

Appointed

HOWARD V. KRICK

FIRM APPOINTS SUPERVISOR

The Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company announces the appointment of Howard V. Krick as unit supervisor in charge of field supervision at its local offices in the Clark Building.

Mr. Krick is a graduate of the University of Pittsburgh, where he made an outstanding record for himself in university activities. He entered the life insurance business in May of 1928, prior to which time he was associated as salesman for the Beaver Products Company.

At the company's recent national convention at Colorado Springs, Mr. Krick was honored as one of the five outstanding leaders in the number of lives insured in the past year. He has also been elected to the position of vice president of the Penn Mutualist Club, composed of several thousand of the leading producers of the company. In making this appointment, Holgar J. Johnson, general agent, brought out the fact that this addition to the supervisory staff has been necessitated because of the local agency's large increase in production over the same period last year.

U. S. Navy Gasoline Contracts Awarded

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—The Navy Department has awarded contracts for approximately 1,895,000 gallons of aviation gasoline. Those receiving contracts include Standard Oil of Kentucky, 940,000 gallons at $114,680; Atlantic Refining, 830,000 gallons at $104,118, and Richfield Oil Corporation, 97,000 gallons at $14,880.

SLIGHT GAIN IN TRADE HERE

Department Store Sales Expand; Collections Still Average Slow

The general business situation continues to show a slight upward trend, although warmer weather this week has had a tendency to slow up buying of seasonable wearing apparel, according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review. Department store sales are reported larger than they have been for several months, stimulated to some extent by aggressive advertising.

Jobbers of men's and women's wearing apparel, dry goods, shoes and millinery report a slightly better demand for merchandise, but orders average rather small. Some improvement is noted in the demand for jewelry, with the sale of novelties being particularly noticeable. Construction work continues comparatively light and the demand for lumber and other building materials continues quiet.

Manufacturers of electrical supplies are fairly busy, although sales are not as large as they were some months ago. A gradual improvement is noted in the demand for radio equipment. Manufacturers of sanitary and heating equipment are transacting somewhat larger volume of business, although sales continue below normal.

Production of crude oil shows a slight reduction, with prices showing practically no change. Mining of bituminous coal continues at about 15 per cent lower than it was last year at this time, and demand is still slow, with prices of slack considerably lower.

Brazil Suspends Duty on Imports

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—Beginning at once, there will be a 60-day suspension in import duties on lard, meat, potatoes, beans, condensed milk, butter, corn and stock feed, cable advices to Commerce Department from Rio de Janeiro report.

STOCK MARKET TONE FIRM AT OPENING

Price Changes Narrow at Start With No Sign of Large Selling Appearing

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—(AP.)—The stock market opened with a firm tone today, and price changes largely narrow. There were no further signs of large scale selling. U. S. Steel opened steady, Radio up ½, Worthington and Montgomery Ward up 1, and Atchison up 1½. American Telephone was up ¼. Westinghouse and Chesapeake and Ohio sagged ½, and Bethlehem 1½.

Early gains of a point or more were lost during the first half hour, as week-end selling appeared in moderate volume. It was notable that trading slackened on the decline as the market will be closed on Monday, Columbus Day, bulls did not make aggressive efforts to press the rally further.

The week-end business and trade reviews, while somewhat confusing owing to the mixed character of the week's developments, reported continued gains in retail trade. Youngstown Sheet and Tube was reported as planning to maintain the current rate of operations next week.

Western Union sold up 4 points and temporary gains of 1 to 1½ points were recorded by U. S. Steel, American Can, Standard of New Jersey, Atchison and Columbian Carbon. The week-end selling movement erased most of these advances and depressed American Telephone, General Electric, New York Central and Westinghouse a point and more.

Foreign exchanges were about steady, with sterling cables renewing at $4.85⅞, off 1-32.

POSTPONE RATE ACTION 90 DAYS

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 11.—Opposition to the efforts of a number of railroads and municipalities to obtain the reopening of the Eastern class freight rate investigation and a revision of the decision made public by the Interstate Commerce Commission was registered today with the commission by the Chamber of Commerce of Pittsburgh.

The protest of the Pittsburgh trade body to a revision of the rates established by the commission and which by an amended order of that body will be placed in effect February 1, 1931, pointed out that while the decision is not completely satisfactory to Pittsburgh, the trade organization is nevertheless willing to give it a trial.

The decision of the commission originally was to have gone into effect November 1, but following the protests the commission postponed the enactment of its order for 90 days.

HOOVER DENIES HELIUM TIEUP

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—(INS.)—President Hoover took cognizance of charges the United States is monopolizing the supply of helium for dirigibles, the lack of which was given as a contributing cause of the disaster to the British dirigible R-101 in France last Saturday.

To the contrary, Mr. Hoover said this government has been promoting the exportation of the noninflammable gas for airships. Helium is produced by both the government and private companies and the law restricts its exportation to other governments to the private concerns, the President said.

During the last two years the government has granted licenses to numerous companies to export the gas and has urged them to secure additional markets for their products.

2 Held in Robbery Of Yukon Merchants

GREENSBURG, Oct. 11.—(AP.)—Two men were under arrest here charged with slugging and robbing Henry Berkovitz, Yukon merchant, at his boarding house September 30.

The men, giving their names as Jack Hall, 20, of near Latrobe, and Buck Weaver, 40, no address, were arrested on suspicion by State Police and checks stolen from Berkovitz were said by the police to have been found on them.

Two Women Hurt As Auto Hits Train

COPPER OUTPUT UP SLIGHTLY

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—Production of copper by United States mines in September totaled 56,584 short tons against 56,136 tons in August and 79,402 in September, 1929, according to the American Bureau of Metal Statistics.

Smelter production of the United State, Canada and Mexico aggregated 85,580 tons in September against 84,560 in August and 84,426 in July.

Surplus of finished copper at refineries in North and South America September 30 totaled 360,650 tons, or 721,300,000 pounds, an increase of 12,962 tons over stocks on September 1.

Total stocks of copper—refined and blister—on October 1 were 597,785 tons, an increase of 15,962 tons during the month.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—Wall street estimates place the amount of copper producers have on their books as sold but undelivered at between 650,000,000 and 700,000,000 pounds. This is roughly equal to the amount of stocks of refined copper as published by the American Bureau of Metal Statistics a month ago.

Wool Trade Has Another Quiet Week

BOSTON, Oct. 10.—The wool trade has passed through another quiet week. Some business is being done at the lower levels noted a week ago, but it is inconsequential. Prices are hardly changed for the week, according to the Commercial Bulletin.

The manufacturing position develops slowly. A somewhat better feeling exists in the woolen end of the trade. On the whole, however, the market seems to be still unsettled, with moderate business in goods being placed from week to week.

The foreign markets are steadier for the moment on the basis of the new low prices established at London and in the primary markets of the Southern hemisphere. The question agitating the minds of the trade is whether this is the final phase of the price-decline.

P.R.R. EARNINGS WILL COVER DIVIDEND

Net of Between $4.50 and $5 a Share Likely to Be Shown for Current Year

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 10.—Although traffic has failed to show the seasonal increase that was anticipated in the summer, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company will more than cover its $4 annual dividend, but the margin of surplus will be dependent upon the course of business in the final quarter of the year.

Current estimates are that the Pennsylvania will show between 9 and 10 per cent earned on its capital stock for 1930, which would be $4.50 to $5 per share, par value being $50. August returns of the Pennsylvania were disappointing as both gross and net failed to show the expected seasonal gain over July, but traffic is now showing some seasonal improvement and the extent to which this belated improvement continues will govern the amount of the year's surplus.

YIELD OVER 5 PER CENT

Directors of the Pennsylvania will act the latter part of this month on the next quarterly dividend which is payable the end of November. It is interesting to recall that the following dividend which is due the latter part of February, 1931, is also charged against 1930 income, so that the May, 1931, dividend will be the first one to be paid out of revenues earned in the new year. By that time a better view of the industrial picture will be at hand as well as prospects for the remainder of that year. At market prices Pennsylvania is selling about 14 times estimated earnings for 1930 and yields over 5 per cent on current $4 annual dividend rate.

GOOD AVERAGE SHOWING

The Pennsylvania has been making a good operating showing notwithstanding the very severe decrease in revenues which it has suffered this year, and although the ratio will fail to better that of preceding year for the first time since the return of the carriers to corporate control in 1921, the showing nevertheless is regarded as a satisfactory one, and will compare favorably with other years since termination of federal control with the exception of the last year or two. For the eight months ended with August, operating ratio was lower than in the corresponding periods of other years since end of federal control with exception of 1929 and 1928, and was only a fraction higher than the latter year. Operating ratio in the first eight months of 1930 was 75.1 per cent, which compares with 71.6 per cent in 1929, with 74.7 per cent in 1928 and with 76.8 per cent in 1927.

Drug Store Robber Suspect Captured

Mt. Lebanon police today were holding a man giving his name as Thomas McClellan, of 1303 Reddour street, North Side, caught with a gun, they said, while attempting to enter a rear basement window of the Elm drug store, at Cochran road and Navato place.

Impaired Freight Cars Total Higher

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—Class I railroads on September 15 had 159,020 freight cars in need of repairs or 7.1 per cent of the number on line, according to the car service division of the American Railway Association.

This was an increase of 5,974 cars above the number in need of repair on September 1, at which time there were 153,046 or 6.8 per cent.

Freight cars in need of heavy repairs on September 15 totaled 109,821, or 4.9 per cent, an increase of 3,121 compared with the number on September 1, while freight cars in need of light repairs totaled 49,199 or 2.2 per cent, an increase of 2,843 compared with September 1.

STEADY BUYING LIFTS LONE STAR GAS

Fuel Leader Encounters Good Demands; Pittsburgh Plate Glass Moves Up

Lone Star Gas displayed good rallying power in the early dealings on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange, going forward slowly but steadily on a fairly large volume of trading. Other fuels were generally steady, but there was a little selling in Western Public Service at the start which carried it back fractionally to the 1930 low of 15¼, established in the previous session.

Industrial issues were somewhat irregular, although there was no noticeable pressure on any particular stock. Pittsburgh Plate Glass was strong, starting at an advance of a full point over the previous close, but fluctuations in other issues were confined to fractions for the most part.

OFFICER HURT, MAN HELD

Charles Tate, 35, a salesman, of Newark, O., alleged to have pushed a policeman from the running board of his automobile at Smithfield and Seventh avenue last night, was in Central Police Station today charged with being a suspicious person.

Patrolman Edward McCall, 26, of Central Station, was attracted to Tate's car which, he said, was being driven in a zig zag manner in Smithfield street. When he stepped to the running board he said, Tate pushed him off. He was cut and bruised.

Patrolman William Dugan, of the Penn Avenue Station, arrested Tate at Twenty-third street and Liberty avenue.

Appoints Receiver For Store Firm

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 11.—The affairs of the Almar Store Company, operating 254 grocery stores in Southeastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey, were placed in the hands of receivers in a friendly suit, and the business will be continued.

Judge J. Whitaker Thompson, in the Federal District Court, appointed Merle C. Wachtel, president of the company, and David J. Smyth, an attorney, as receivers.

CORPORATE EARNINGS

Otis Elevator Company net income for quarter to September 30 was $2,022,371 after depreciation, federal taxes, etc., against $1,863,622 in the third quarter of 1929.

The White Rock Mineral Springs Company reported that net earnings in the first nine months of 1930 were equivalent to $3.54 a common share, as against $3.16 in the corresponding period last year. Third quarter earnings were $1.16 a share, as against $1.40 in the previous quarter and $1.08 in the third quarter last year.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND VIEWS

BRITISH OVERSEAS AUTO TRADE

The Department of Commerce is in receipt of information concerning comprehensive plans by the British automobile industry in the Humber-Hillman-Commer combine for the manufacture of cars exclusively for overseas markets. The combine's factory at Coventry has been set aside for this purpose. Large numbers of factory representatives are to be sent to important world markets. A large central clearing house in London is to be established for this overseas trade. It is further reported that over 600 agents from almost every dominion and foreign country attended a large meeting at the Humber works at Coventry on September 10. The new models to be displayed were reported not to differ greatly from last year's products, but to be much lower in price.

AUTOMOBILE REPOSSESSIONS

The American Motorists' Association reports to the Census Bureau that the percentage of repossessions of motor cars for nonpayment ranged in 1929 from 2.8 to 5.1 per cent, according to whether the down payment was 33.3 or 25 per cent of the purchase price of the car. The analysis covers reports by 425 companies engaged in automobile financing. Less than 4 per cent of the 3,478,373 cars financed in 1929 were reported repossessed. It is stated that approximately 61 per cent of all passenger automobiles purchased in the year, including 1,657,938 second hand cars, were bought on the installment plan, the average deferred payment on each car being $444.30.

REDUCTION IN GRAIN-FED CATTLE

Shipments of stocker and feeder cattle into the 11 corn belt states during the three months embracing July and September point to a material reduction in the supply of grain finished cattle to be marketed during the coming winter, according to the Department of Agriculture. The number of cattle and calves inspected for shipment into this area was 25 per cent smaller than for the same period last year, 30 per cent under the five-year average, and much the smallest in 12 years, the department says. There seems little likelihood that the movement of unfinished cattle during the last three motnhs of this year will be much larger relatively than during the three months including July and September.

COTTON CLOTHS STOCKS

Stocks of standard cotton cloths decreased 11.4 per cent during September to 392,406,000 yards at the end of the month, the Association of Cotton Textile Merchants of New York reported. Unfilled orders as of September 30 were 285,427,000 yards, an increase of 26.1 per cent during the month. Production in September totaled 182,385,000 yards, or at the rate of 45,596,000 yards per week for the four weeks, a decrease of 32.1 per cent from production for the like month last year. Sales totaled 291,980,000 yards, or 160.1 per cent of production, while shipments during the month totaled 232,975,000 yards.

ST. LOUIS GRAIN EXCHANGE

With a turnover of approximately 73,610,400 bushels of grain in 1929 valued at about $81,000,000, the St. Louis Merchants Exchange ranks among the four largest grain markets in the world, according to C. B. Rader, secretary. The grains which are sold on the St. Louis Exchange come principally from Iowa, Missouri, Illinois, Kansas, Nebraska and Indiana. An average of about 6,250,000 bushels of wheat are stored daily in elevators around the city, until shipped. About 640,778 bushels of oats also are stored in elevators awaiting removal.

LUMBER MILLS NEAR CAPACITY

Reports from 875 leading lumber mills to the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association indicate combined new business received at hardwood and softwood mills during the week ended September 13 was within 2 per cent of total production. Operating on a radically curtailed production basis, orders at reporting hardwood mills exceeded the cut by 9 per cent, the best ratio in some months. Reports showed softwood orders 97 per cent of the cut. Combined production of the reporting mills totaled 273,844,000 feet.

SLUMPS CAUSE OF POLITICAL SHAKEUPS

Latin American Revolts Laid to Depression—U. S. History Shows Upheavals

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—A secondary effect of the world-wide depression has been to enable the political "outs" to oust the "ins" in numerous countries.

In the United States, the chief political riddle is the extent to which the Democratic party will show gains over the Republican in peaceful and orderly balloting next month. In Latin America, on the other hand, there has been a series of acts involving the forcible overthrow of established rulers. Raw materials, priced at or below the cost of production, lead to widespread discontent in Latin America, which, in accordance with the doctrine of economic determinism, resulted in violent political overturns.

M. S. Rukeyser.

An examination of the results of 25 presidential or congressional elections in the United States since 1880, indicate that, as one might expect, political upsets are far more common in years of poor business than in periods of prosperity. During the last 50 years in the United States in 14 election years, when business was either depressed or receding, there were nine political upsets, resulting in turning over the presidency of one or both of the houses of Congress to the control of the opposition party.

ONLY FOUR UPSETS

On the other hand, in 11 years, when business was either prosperous or in the process of improving, there were only four political upsets.

Prosperity broke down primarily because of the lack of an organized mechanism for co-ordinating the factors of supply and demand.

In place of an integrating intelligence, there has been rampant anarchy in business. Some of the bankers who now urge letting nature take its course were equally resigned a year or more ago to financing unwarranted over-optimism.

Mere palliatives are concededly readily swept aside by the torrential winds of liquidation, but the time has come to consider organizing constructive business forces. Since the depression is international, Dr. H. Schacht, formerly head of the Reichsbank, has put forth the interesting suggestion that curative programs should also be developed through international co-operation among business men.

In pre-war crisis, as in 1907, there was more decisive leadership in the financial world, which accepted the judgment of J. Pierpont Morgan. Morgan believed in the capacity of intelligent leadership to influence the course of events. And in his policies Morgan was moved by an immense faith in the long term future of American business. Nowadays, some financiers in high places are content to sit passively and advise good clients to sell equities after the event of depression.

The turn stock-marketwise will come when equities to a decisive extent get into the hands of willing investors. This process has been quickened in recent weeks. Involuntary investors, who got hung up with shares that they had originally bought for a quick turn, have been painfully liquidating their position. Irrespective of immediate short term speculative spasms, there will be rewards for those who show faith in outstanding American corporations at a time when pessimism is popular. It may be a hazardous time to go into debt, but it is a propitious occasion to make plans conservatively to pick up on a cash basis equities which are sacrificed below their intrinsic value. The more venturesome in times like this get opportunities to acquire for a pittance options on the contingent prosperity of the future in the form of perpetual or long-term stock purchase warrants or convertible bond issues.

WEATHER STORM

Those who, during the bull market, forsook conservative investment principles, have subsequently lost faith in modern business leadership, but they have been looking too much at the course of speculative common stocks. The great popular savings institutions — the life insurance companies and the mutual savings banks—have stood up during the depression like the Rock of Gibraltar. Those who desire to hedge against their own personal mistakes in handling savings can eliminate the personal equation from investments by purchasing an annuity — a depression-proof investment — from a standard life insurance company. An annuity can be purchased either in serial deposits through the productive years or through a lump sum single payment. Annuities can be made payable immediately, or at deferred period, such as at the age of 65. For persons over 60, without heirs, a higher return, consistent with safety, can be obtained through non-refund annuities than in any other way. For example, a woman, 65, with $15,000, would get an income return of only $750 a year from 5 per cent bonds, but would collect $1,441 a year from an annuity.

Steel Tonnage Report's Favorable Aspects Overlooked.

Favorable aspects of the United States Steel tonnage figures were entirely overlooked. Many in the financial district had predicted that the corporation would report another large decrease in unfilled orders with most guesses ranging between 250,000 and 300,000 tons. For that reason the actual reduction of 155,000 tons can be viewed as constructive particularly when it is compared with the decrease of 441,851 tons in August. There was some improvement in new buying last month, and this coupled with reduced shipments by the corporation resulted in the smaller decrease. Operating officials of the leading interest continue to run mills at about the rate of specifications and little or no surplus material has been accumulated by the corporation.

Heavy selling which came into the market through the first half of yesterday, and particularly following the opening, suggested that response to margin calls sent out Thursday had not been any too encouraging. At any rate the flood of selling which hit stocks during the first two hours indicated that a good deal of forced liquidation was in order. The rush of offerings was so intense that it finally swamped support buying and swept stocks almost without exception to new low levels for the decline. Steel common was in the van of the downward movement again yielding grudgingly but steadily nevertheless to new low levels under 145.

This week's contraction of $158,000,000 in collateral borrowings as reported by the Federal Reserve, following the $159,000,000 drop reported in the previous week, brings the total under the $3,000,000,000 and to the lowest level reported since April 27, 1927. Unlike last week's figures which showed loans for local banks' own account up $113,000,000 in face of a sharp drop in "others" loans, the figures this week show all three groups participated in the reduction. Loans for own account dropped $94,000,000, while advances for out-of-town banks shrunk $47,000,000, bringing the total reduction for the latter to $227,000,000 in a fortnight and advances for the account of others declined by $17,000,000. The current total of brokers' loans is now equivalent to but 43 per cent of the peak of $6,804,000,000 reached on October 2 last year.

Yesterday's most spectacular movements developed in the amusement shares as a group, with interest centering particularly in the Fox group, including Fox Film, General Theaters Equipment and Loews, Inc., the market values of those three issues melted away steadily throughout the first three hours, until all three had been driven down to new low levels for the current decline, with net losses at the bottom amounting to 9½ points in Fox, 8 points in General Theaters Equipment and 10¾ points in Loews, Inc., the low levels were reached on a swift plunge and it looked very much as though stock which had been loaned against "short commitments" in those issues had been called. All three stocks turned a complete "about face," running back in the space of a few minutes to levels at which the bulk of the morning's decline had been recovered.

Perhaps the most severe break of yesterday took the form of a precipitate drop of 34 points in Industrial Rayon which sunk on a few transactions to new low levels in the low 30's. Yesterday's low contrasted with a closing level of 65 Thursday night, and with the year's high of 124. The acute weakness in that particular issue was ascribed to the liquidation of a collateral loan which was secured by a substantial block of the stock.

The sudden change of front in the market yesterday came so suddenly that it was viewed skeptically in many quarters for a time after the turn developed. But as the market turned into the final hour the rebound gathered momentum and showed a strong tendency to broaden out, embracing virtually the entire list. Necessitous selling had apparently run its course for the time being as the lows levels were established in the noon hour. At any rate there was little indication that any material quantity of stock was hanging over the market as the rally progressed. There were moments of hesitation as stocks crept back over the ground lost earlier, but demand was quite insistent and progressive improvement was in order through the closing period, with many stocks ending the day at net advances.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Colds Season Here, Guard Children

With the coming of the first cool fall days and the opening of school, children are exposed to the infectious colds. The close contact of crowded rooms makes it almost impossible to escape.

DR COPELAND

What is to be done about it?

Nearly all the diseases of the nose, throat and lungs are infectious and communicable. They are most troublesome during the first chilly days when proper ventilation is difficult. The rooms are not likely to be heated and the frequent changes in temperature make it hard to adjust the clothing properly.

Your efforts to counteract a cold cannot be used too early. Just as soon as your baby or older child begins to sniffle and sneeze and cough then quick measures should be taken for relief.

Because of the fact that colds are "catching" the patient should be separated from others of the family. It is well to keep the child in bed at least a day or two. It is only in this way that the body temperature can be kept stable and proper rest maintained.

If a child has no fever he may be placed on a cot out-of-doors in the sunshine if the weather is good. Otherwise he should be in bed indoors, with the windows open to let in plenty of fresh air. Of course, the child should not be allowed to get chilled. It is best to be warmly enough covered, but not too warmly wrapped up. You must guard against conditions which produce free perspiration and further chilling. Keep the patient just comfortably warm.

I feel sorry for the poor mother who must keep an active child in bed. A child is easily bored and resentful of restraint. It is a wise mother who keeps in reserve some especially attractive and well-liked toy or game for the sick-a-bed days.

Not only is the little patient isolated from others, with rest, fresh air, quiet and warmth, but he is given some milk alkaline water or bicarbonate of soda in water. This may be administered in combination with juices of the citrous fruits. The juices of oranges, lemons or grapefruit are taken with the alkaline water, or separately, at intervals of two or three hours.

One of the uncomfortable things about a cold is the inability to breathe freely through the nose. Secretions in the nose lead to mouth breathing and sleepless nights. Propping up the head with extra pillows will help the patient to breathe more easily. Steam inhalations are useful in severe cases.

Sleep restores spent energy and builds up body resistance to colds and other diseases. With plenty of sleep and rest, simple, nutritious food and attention to elimination of the body wastes, a cold should be a thing of the past in the course of a few days.

Answers to Health Queries

R. L.—Are salts harmful to the body?

2. Do you advise treatment for swollen and inflamed eyes?

3. What kind of exercise is good for reducing a large abdomen?

A.—Salts should only be taken occasionally. If they are taken for constipation this trouble should be corrected by proper diet.

2. Yes.

3. The old-fashioned and often-talked-about exercises—namely, knee bending and bending over and touching the floor without bending the knees—are well recommended. However, do not forget that consistent daily practice is essential. You should watch your diet, too.

Kinky Orders Henchmen to Kill Edgewater Kid

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER III.

Polack Annie sat on a cushion at the feet of the Edgewater Kid. She turned her big, opalescent eyes upward. They lit with passionate pride at what they took in. The Kid was a handsome thing.

"Kid," she breathed, "I never knew what love was till I met you."

He stroked his fiery hair. He purred. He relaxed and drew deep upon his cigaret.

"Kid," she sighed, "I wish I'd never met Kinky King."

"If you hadn't," he puffed, "you prob'ly never would o' met me."

"I mean I wish I could o' met you an' never o' met him. He's a wicked baby, that Kinky. He's tough, boy—he's plenty tough."

"I've met a few what are tough, sugar—an' my experience with 'em has been that when it comes right down to a showdown, you hit 'em in the mush with a creampuff an' you pick 'em up with a sponge."

She looked alarmed.

"Oh, honey—don't rate Kinky in that class. He's a killer. He'd knock off his brother an' never turn to spit. When he was givin' you an' the rest o' Goldie Gorio's mob the works, man, I was with him—I know."

Kinky Dangerous

Kid Is Warned to Be Careful

"We trimmed him, didn't we?"

"No—I don't think youse did—it was about give an' take."

"Oh, was it? When Goldie an' us was barricaded in our headquarters him an' his yeller outfit, 12 cars strong, shot by at 50 miles an hour an' turned loose typewriters on us an' riddled the buildin'—an' croaked a woman an' a kid on the sidewalk—an' kep' on stepping'—I don' call that tough."

"Oh, no? That's tough enough for me. Jus' becus he's that kind o' rat what takes as few chances for himself as he can an' mows down anybody what's in his way in some such manner as this, is why I say he's dangerous . . . oh, Kid, watch out—take care o' yourself—take no chances—if anything happened to you——"

The Edgewater Kid chuckled.

"Gee," he said, "it's fine to have you care that much. But don't let it worry one red hair o' your sweet dome, babe. They ain' takin' the Edgewater Kid for no rides. I'm too fast for 'em. An' they know in their crooked hearts that if anything happens to me, Goldie an' my buddies'll clean 'em out like the inside of a fish. Kinky's takin' down a flock o' jack. He's got the whole West Side. He's ridin' easy an' sittin' pretty. He ain't suckin' aroun' for no trouble—least of all with Goldie."

She shook her head slowly, solemnly.

"You don't know him, Kid—I tell you, you don' know him. He lushes his own stuff. He don' handle the real McCoy. He shoves that Wop bathtub slop. An' he guzzles it, himself. An' when he swills up a bellyful o' that hogwash, he goes cookoo. He bulldozes his boys an' there ain't a one of 'em peeps back at him. I tell you, when he's that way he ain't human."

"A hunk o' lead don' know the diff'rence, beautiful, whether a man is cockeyed or sober, or if he's tire-tread or putty. They never made one yet so tough he could shed bullets."

"I know—I know. If he gets you, they'll get him. But what good'll that do me? I don' want revenge. I don' want nothin'—nothin' but you — you—that's all—"

"Well, what you bleatin' about? You got me."

"But," and she scrambled on her knees and embraced his thighs and buried her head in his chest, "I want you always—forever—you—just you—for me—with me—and, oh, Kid my lover, I'm so scared—so worried—"

He kissed the top of her head.

"Aw, bottle it," he urged, tenderly enough. "Didn' I tell you there's nothing to lose sleep about? I'm watchin' myself. You been with me now seven weeks. No body's made a pass at me yet."

Kid Amused

Knew That Kinky Was Angered

"Did you see the face on Kinky t'night, when he saw us come in the Devil's Hall?"

The Kid broke into a choking laughter.

"Did I? Not much. Say, he torched. I thought he was gonna pull his rod an' open up right then an' there . . . when he didn't, I knew he was doggin' it. I had my hand on my gat, ready to duck under the table an' shoot it out with him if he made one false pass. He was sizzlin'—but he took it out shootin' off his pan to that blonde bozo with him. I bet he was handin' her a hot line. She kep' slantin' me, too, all the time—"

"Yes—I noticed that myself. She better look out, or there'll be some artillery from this end. She copped Kinky from a jane twice as good lookin' as herself. That kind o' larceny is her ducksoup."

The Kid giggled and scratched her head.

"Nobody's stealin' me from you, mamma — an' nobody's shootin' me out o' your arms, neither. This here combination is set. Ain't that enough?"

"It's enough—oh, it's too much," she emoted, quivering and straining him to her.

In Kinky King's costly, garish apartment over a slovenly barber shop, the exterior of which scarcely conveyed a suspicion that within was the habitat, the executive mansion, the playhouse and the retreat of the West Side liquor monarch, King was stamping up and down the carpet. His coat and vest lay on the floor where he had flung them. His collar was open wide and his tie flapped and floated freely as he paced.

Devilish Orders

Gangsters Instructed to Kill the Kid

Seated together were two of his scoundrels, "Bite" Ferrone and "Pinky" Shapiro. Ferrone was short and massive, masculiar, powerful and brutal. Shapiro looked anaemic, his cheeks caved in and his frame emaciated. His complexion had the flush of consumption.

King staggered as he strode. His florid countenance proclaimed him drunk if his unsteady gait missed the eye. His fists were closed, his eyes were almost closed, his chest bobbed up and down as he panted and exploded.

"I want that Edgewater Kid," he roared. "If youse two can croak him an' not be tipped off, okay; if youse can't, do it anyways."

Shapiro rubbed his thin chin.

"But—why?" he ventured to inquire.

"Because I say so—an' they ain' no better reason!"

Ferrone offered no argument.

"I'll put it up to the boys," he said, "an' we'll dope out the best system. Maybe we can get away wit' it clean. The Kid lives in a kind o' lonely neighborhood. O' course, it's as much as our life is worth, any of us, to have Goldie ketch us on the Nort' Side—"

"Well? You've took chances before, haven't you? If you want a safe an' simple life an' wanna raise kids an' whiskers, go back shinin' shoes."

"Oh, I ain't crawfishin', boss—I'm jus' goin' over the ground. Maybe it'd be better to double-team the Kid downtown—"

"You're crazy," interrupted Shapiro. "We'll put a trailer on the Kid, get the lowdown on his habits, an' plant a typewriter—if Hymie Weiss could be got that way, the Edgewater Kid could."

Monotony

Things Are Too Quiet to Please Kinky

"I don't care if you stick a pineapple under him or tear him to pieces wit' your own hands. I don' care if you do it in the woods or in City Hall. But—get me action. Have a drink."

He gurgled out half a tumbler for each of them. Shapiro threw his down, and his meager body bobbed under it like a ship hit by a breaker. Ferrone dispatched his neatly. King braced his big feet and drained his glass, after which he pitched it into the fireplace, where it smashed to bits. He spat.

"The Edgewater Kid!" It's a fine set-up when that kind o' penny-ante split-case bootleggers start pullin' fast ones on Kinky King," he growled. "If a dame is pinheaded enough not to know nothin' that's rough enough. But when one o' Goldie Gorio's stooges puts her up to it, gets away wit' it, an' tosses it in my puss besides—say, they can burn me in the chair before I let that kind o' punks hijack my woman an' die of o' age."

"I—I don' blame you at all," effused Shapiro, half-heartedly. "I'd do the same in the same place."

"Never mind what you'd do—go out an' do it. This is what, Thursd'y? By Sund'y I want some noise. We been so quiet an' peaceful, anyways, since that agreement wit' the Mayor an' Goldie an' Hannibal, it's gettin' on my nerves. If it went on like this very long, I'd go out an' angle a Chink. This is a spot. I got a reason—a damn good one."

"I shall say you have," chimed in Shapiro.

"Anyway," said Ferrone, "we'll put it over."

"That's what I call conversation," cackled Kinky King. "Have another drink?"

OPEN DATES BENEFIT TWO-MAN STAFF

George Earnshaw

WOULD THE RESULT of the World Series have been different if a club other than the Cardinals had won the National League pennant and with it the right to meet the Athletics in the post-season title argument? Though giving the A's all due credit for their victory, and not offering the thought as an alibi, National League followers are inclined to believe it was rather a fortunate break for Mack and his two-man pitching staff of George Earnshaw and Bob Grove that St. Louis, a Western city, happened to be the scene of half of the world championship battling.

Perhaps the outcome would have been the same in any event, but in view of the conditions under which the A's won out after a struggle of six games, it appears that they might have found the going considerably more difficult if their opponents had been the Robins or Giants instead of the Redbirds. This possibility suggests itself from a geographical rather than a baseball angle, and entirely apart from the chance that the Brooklyn club or the New York club might have played better ball than St. Louis, or might have been handled with better generalship than Gabby Street showed in directing the Cardinals.

THE REASON IS that if Brooklyn or New York had won the National League pennant, the World Series schedule would have been changed in a way not conducive to the success of a club forced to depend upon two pitchers. There would have been no open dates in the program. The jump from Philadelphia to the home of the Robins or Giants, and back again, can be made in a couple of hours, and a game could have been played every day.

Under those conditions the six games in the series could have been run off in six days instead of eight, as was the case. That would have eliminated the off days that followed the second and fifth contests, and Earnshaw and Grove would have been required to pitch their five games in six days. Earnshaw could not have started the fifth and sixth games, as he did, without pitching on successive days. It is a question whether the two great pitchers, iron men though they are, would have been able to get through as well as they did if the jumps from Philadelphia to St. Louis and return had not given them a day of rest each time, even though the off days were spent on railroad trains.

FEEBLE AS HE was on the offense in the 1930 title series, First Baseman Jim Bottomley, of the Cardinals, did not sink to record depths when he struck out nine times during the course of the derby. He topped Rogers Hornsby's performance of 1929 by a single whiff, but fell one short of the series mark.

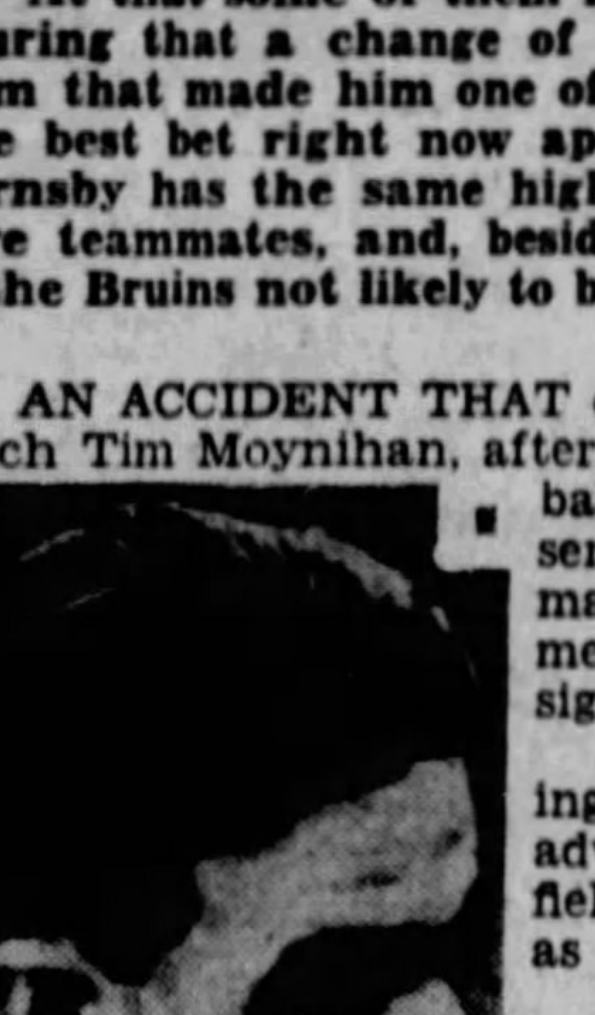
George Kelly.

That record is 10 strikeouts, set by George Kelly while playing for the Giants against the Yankees in 1921. Perhaps it was only a difference in times at bat that kept Bottomley from going beyond Kelly's figures, however, as Jim played in only six games while Kelly's record series ran to eight.

THERE IS MUCH speculation as to what effect Bottomley's dismal showing in the World Series will have upon the anticipated efforts of the Cardinal management to trade or sell him during the off-season It is known that Bottomley is on the market. Planning to try Jim Collins, of their Rochester farm, at first base next year, the Redbird chiefs some time ago sent out feelers for a Bottomley deal, and it is a foregone conclusion that they will try to make a dicker for his transfer to another National League club during the winter. It is understood that they hope to get a wad of cash as well as a player in exchange for him, but whether or not other clubs will be as willing to talk trade for him now as they were before he proved such a bust in the World Series remains to be seen.

CERTAINLY, THE SELLING value of Bottomley was not increased by his poor work in the title stakes, as a player with such a batting weakness under pressure as an average of .045 would appear to indicate may be looked upon by the average manager as having seen his best days.

At that some of them may be willing to take a chance with him, figuring that a change of scenery may help him to regain the old form that made him one of the most valuable players in the majors. The best bet right now appears to be that he will go to the Cubs. Hornsby has the same high regard for him that he had when they were teammates, and, besides, Lefty Grimm has been named as one of the Bruins not likely to be retained by the new Bruin pilot.



Tim Moynihan.

AN ACCIDENT THAT occurred in Los Angeles two years ago, in which Tim Moynihan, after playing center for the Notre Dame football team against Southern California, was seriously injured in rolling into the 40-yard marker on the side lines, has led to a movement to do away with the present yardage signs.

In the Far West, in particular, men seeking better football conditions are strongly advocating a new system for marking the field that will eliminate the rigid markers as a source of danger to the players.

POINTING TO THE Moynihan mishap as a warning, and adding that several other players have been injured in the same manner during the last few years, those behind the movement contend that the present wooden markers should be replaced with a kind less likely to injure players. They are suggesting rubber signs on the order of those used as roadway zone markers in some parts of the country, and which, when hit, merely bends over and then flops up again. It is argued that football at best is hard enough on the players, and that they should be surrounded by all the protection that can be given to them.

THOSE IN A position to know something about the negotiations between Joe McCarthy and Col. Jacob Ruppert, which ended in the engagement of McCarthy to succeed Bob Shawkey as manager of the Yankees next season, say that Joe's annual salary is to be $40,000 and that his contract will be for two years.

McCarthy's salary in Chicago was $25,000, in addition to which he received a bonus of $10,000 for winning the pennant in 1929 and a bonus of $5,000 for finishing second in 1930. As reported in the Sun-Telegraph recently, it is said to be assured that Jimmy Burke will go from the Cubs to the Yankees with McCarthy to supplant Arthur Fletcher as coach.

BAN JOHNSON, former president of the American League, was one of the first to congratulate Col. Ruppert on his success in landing McCarthy to manage the Yankees. Ban says McCarthy is one of the CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—Duquesne's Night Riders galloped abroad on the broad field of the Loyola University here last evening and after hectic sessions of plunging and counter-plunging, passes and counter-passes, helped history repeat itself to the tune of 7 to 6 in Bluffite favor. Some 8,000 fans, including scores of Pittsburghers who made the Windy City trek by special train and auto caravan, beheld the dogged Layden host battle out its single-point triumph after brilliant first-period work by Capt. Les Molloy, of the Chicago Ramblers, who had slipped the home array to an early advantage and apparently stacked the cards for a Maroon success.

Ganzy Benedict tossed to Kass Kovalcheck, and Bud Devinney helped materially to set stage for the hero act last night, but 'twas tiny Red Sullivan, former Westinghouse High School ace, who scurried round left wing from the two-yard mark to garner the six-ply counter, and Kovalcheck, line-splintering fullback, who propelled the spheroid between the uprights to nullify the Ramblers' gallant opening-stanza effort.

MOLLOY STARS

This Les Molloy caused the Hill Toppers an anxious moment. On the first Loyola sortie of the tussle, he skirted starboard terminal for 28 yards to the Red and Blue 35 stripe. Pat Lally, rangy pivot star of the visitors, intercepted a Molloy heave on the Duquesne 34-mark a few plays later to nip a dangerous Maroon drive ere damage could be accomplished, but not long thereafter the Ramblers, having snared the oval on their own 45-yard line, when the Steel Citians injudiciously attempted a lengthy and incomplete Benedict-to-Pratt pass, the doughty Malloy sped off and away around right end for 50 good, clean yards. Les would have landed the touchdown then and there had not Mike Ferraro, Duke left guard, spurted brilliantly to down him from behind a scant five yards from the final chalk.

Ferraro, injured on the play, was removed in favor of Folio, who performed right nobly throughout much of the remainder of the fray. Steve Furchess, Rambler right half, was spilled for a setback for a yard at left terminal. The redoubtable Molloy knifed right tackle for three. On the succeeding square-off the Maroons crossed the dope by shipping Furchess sharply 'round port and to hurtle over in rolling heap for the score. Molloy's placement, with Quarterback McClellan planting the apple, was low and a little wide, and then and there the Rambler cause was ruined.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 11.—In what figures to be just another ball game, with the outcome all too certain, Pitt and Western Reserve clash in League Park here this afternoon. The game is a breather for the Panthers, who must bite into the tough part of their card starting with Syracuse next week. What the afternoon will bring for Reserve remains to be seen.

The Panther squad, 35 strong, with MacMurdo, Cohen and Walton missing, arrived last night. Pitt headquarters were established at the Hotel Statler. MacMurdo, Walton and Cohen were injured last week, Walton suffering a broken shoulder and MacMurdo an injured knee.

SCHULTZ TO START

The Redcats were far from impressive in their initial tussle of the season last week. Muskingum College (the same Muskingum that has a habit of dropping in on Pittsburgh and taking Duquesne in basketball) came here to Cleveland and, when the dust had settled, Reserve's Redcats were on the short end of an 18-6 score. With his squad more or less crippled and bruised following the game with West Virginia last week, Coach Sutherland does not plan to put a great deal of pressure on today's encounter. The first-stringers, whether they are bruised or not, are due to spend most of the afternoon on the bench.

Eddie Schultz has been named to start at left end in the stead of the injured MacMurdo. This will be Eddie's first crack at a starting job in the three years he's been on the squad. Rip Collins, his fractured rib all but mended, is to go at the other wing. Quatsie and Tully, the regular tackles, will see opening action in their respective positions, and Ernie Lewis and Hart Morris will be at the guards. Daugherty will be over the ball.

In the backfield, Capt. Eddie Baker will be paired off with Josh Williams and Whitey Walinchus at the halves, and the burly Hood at fullback. Various and sundry ciation, who will occupy seats in sections 16 and 17. Three bands will furnish the music for the occasion.

Two changes were announced in the lineup of the Georgians following yesterday's workout. Capt. Earl Dunlap will start at quarterback instead of left half and Doug Graydon will get the call at the latter post.

PITT AT CLEVELAND

Other district elevens, with a few exceptions, are seeing action on home and foreign fields today. The Panthers, of Pitt, are in Cleveland to tilt with Western Reserve University in what is expected to be a "breather" game on the local team's card. The Dukes, of Duquesne University, are witnessing the Notre Dame-Navy game at South Bend, Ind., following their win over Loyola at Chicago last night. Grove City played John Carroll at Cleveland and Davis and Elkins battled Mt. Union at Alliance, O., while West Virginia Wesleyan tangled with Georgetown at Washington, D. C., last night.

West Virginia University and Washington and Lee hook up in their annual fracas at Charleston, W. Va. Wash.-Jeff. meets Wittenberg at Springfield, O., in a return encounter, the Ohio eleven having met the Presidents in Washington last year. This game, while it has the general appearance of a warm-up affair, may be tougher for the Presidents than it appears, for last year the Lutherans held the Red and Black to a 15-0 score. Waynesburg and St. Bonaventure go to it in Olean, N. Y., with the Jackets apparently due for another defeat.

GENEVA PLAYS THIEL

Geneva and Thiel clash in a Tri-State Conference battle at Greenville. The Lutherans have a strong team, as attested by the struggles they put up against Temple and Carnegie Tech, and they figure to give Howard Harpster's charges a hectic afternoon.

Marshall College, West Virginia's up-and-coming institute, plays Penn State at State College. Clarion and Slippery Rock State Teachers have a gridiron party on at Slippery Rock. St. Vincent meets St. Thomas at Scranton. Allegheny and Westminster hook up at New Wilmington in a feature Conference battle.

St. Francis and Rider College, of Brooklyn, N. Y., meet in a night game at Johnstown, while the Pitt Freshmen open their season against the George Washington University yearlings in Washington, D. C., in another nocturnal fray. The Tech Plebes played Kiski in the Tech Bowl this morning.

Ens' Team Wins In Cuban Series

HAVANA, Cuba, Oct. 11.—(AP.)—With Larry French, Pittsburgh southpaw, and Carl Hubbell, of the New York Giants, hooking up in a pitchers' duel, a team of major league stars led by Jewel Ens, Pirate manager, defeated another collection of stars captained by Dave Bancroft, 2 to 0, yesterday in the first of a seven-game series in Cuba.

Hubbell let the Ens' team down with four hits, while the Bancroft aggregation of stars collected six off French. Traynor, Pittsburgh third baseman, and Hurst, Phillies first baseman, scored the two runs in the second and third innings. The score by innings:

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

Scott High, of North Braddock, held the Clairton W. P. I. A. L. 1929 champions to a scoreless tie last night in a brilliant struggle at Scott Field. The lighted field was packed to capacity for the big scrap, many fans being turned away.

Clairton was the favorite, in view of past performance, the invading host coming into North Braddock with an undefeated record stretched over four years.

FINE GAME

Both clubs showed the overflow throng a variety of fine football plays, the whole spectacle being one that bordered close to the speed and skill of a college performance.

Scott gave the Clairton boys a bad scare near the close of the first half. Through the medium of a fine forward pass they carried the ball to within five yards of the enemy goal, but they were still almost five yards away when the whistle sounded. The lineup:

Scott—0.		Clairton—0.

STOWE DEDICATES FIELD

The dedication of its new athletic field was well celebrated yesterday when Stowe Township High defeated the visiting Braddock's machine, 26 to 7. The feature of the contest was Bruckman's fine work in running the length of the field for a touchdown in the final quarter. The lineup:

Stowe—26.		Braddock—7.
Cook	L.E.	[illegible]
Hart	L.T.	[illegible]
[illegible]	L.G.	[illegible]
Mulligan	C.	[illegible]

Cusano	R.E.	Rudolph
Macalka	Q.	Kreling
Tatala	L.H.	[illegible]
Giaquinto	R.H.	McCabe
Gmeindel	F.	[illegible]

SHUTOUTS MARK GAMES

Shutouts marked the combats yesterday between City League machines. Westinghouse High shut out Carrick, 25 to 0; Perry bumped Allegheny, 13 to 0; South Hills blanked Langley, 19 to 0, and Peabody walloped Allderdice, 13 to 0.

Bellevue High traveled to New Castle and was on the short end of a 21-0 tally; Verona whitewashed Millvale, 33-0; McDonald topped Avella, 54-0; Beaver trumped Sewickley, 20-0; Charleroi battered Sharpsville, 12-0, and Steubenville whipped Columbus Central, 45-0, in other shutout battles.

Crafton won from Avalon, 20-6; Ben Avon and Dormont played a 6-6 tie; Swissvale nosed out Munhall, 7-6; Peters Township beat Imperial, 7-6; Redstone humiliated Trinity, 20-2; Ellsworth and South Brownsville deadlocked, 6-6, and East Washington and Jefferson played a scoreless tie.

ARNOLD, LITZ SET FOR RACE

ALTOONA, Pa., Oct. 11.—Two of the greatest automobile race jockeys to ever sit behind a steering wheel are ready to toe the mark on the Altoona Speedway at 2 p. m. today for what has been heralded as the "speed battle of the century."

Awaiting the starter's flag is Billy Arnold, king of the racing fraternity, and Deacon Litz, recognized as the fastest American driver now living.

Both are anxious for the start, Arnold, because he will be defending a victory he earned here Labor Day when Old Man Weather cut the 200-mile event to 93 laps, and Litz, because he will attempt to prove to thousands of friends and to Arnold that the champion won a "fluke" victory.

Arnold and Litz will battle through three heats, the first 10 miles, the second 10 miles and the final 20 miles.

GAME STARTS AT 1:30

The Horning-Heidelberg game, scheduled for tomorrow afternoon, at Heidelberg, will start at 1:30. Referee Verish please take notice.

MY FIFTY YEARS IN BASEBALL

By CONNIE MACK,

Manager, World Champion Philadelphia Athletics

INSTALLMENT NO 30.

The Athletics were a good second in 1908, finishing with a record of 95 victories and 58 defeats. Our average of .621 was better than our first pennant year in 1902 and equaled that of 1905, when we won our second flag. So, in 1909, the Athletics gave a good hint of what they were going to do in 1910. Nor were their followers disappointed.

Connie Mack.

In essentials, the Athletics were not changed much for the 1910 race. The pitchers were Plank, Coombs, Morgan, Krause and Dygert, with Thomas, Lapp and Livingstone carrying the catching burden.

Davis, Collins, Barry and Baker filled their familiar infield posts, with First Baseman Ben Houser and Infielders McInnis and Rath in reserve. The outfield consisted of Oldring, Lord, Murphy, Strunk and Heitmiller.

The Athletics of 1910 were off to a good start, and, while one or two rivals pressed us up to September, they gradually wore them down and won by the big margin of about 15 games over New York. The record that year was 102 victories and 48 defeats, for an average of .680.

Four of our pitchers did the brunt of the work. They were Plank, Bender, Coombs and Morgan. This was the year that Coombs developed into a mighty curver, this famous pitcher, who now is coaching Duke University's baseball team, winning no fewer than 31 of our games, while he lost only nine.

MEET CUBS IN SERIES

Now that the pennant was won, all thoughts turned to the world series. Frank Chance's powerful Chicago machine had won the National League championship and it was this wonderful band that we had to combat.

The Cubs were the model team of baseball, in the opinion of the majority of experts and fans. They had knocked off the Tigers in the 1907 and 1908 world series, and Detroit also lost to the Pirates in the big classic of 1909.

The situation was this. The American League for three straight seasons had been beaten in the world series with a National League rival and now, in the fall of 1910, the young Athletics team was obliged to meet Chance's experienced and unabashed players, who had met the test of numerous campaigns and never had been found wanting.

It was up to my youths to overthrow these powerful rivals to regain prestige for the American League chiefs, who had been twiddling their thumbs since Comiskey's victory in 1906 for a team that could win the big title.

All of the wise men of baseball predicted an easy conquest for the Cubs. In fact, I don't believe any team ever started a World Series with its chances so universally belittled and scoffed at by the country at large as were the Athletics that fall.

We were told our pitchers were made to order for the Cubs. It rang in our ears constantly that the National Leaguers would run wild on the bases, as we had no catchers with an arm to stop them.

BENDER WINS OPENER

It was added that John Kling, the Cub receiver, one of the greatest in his day, would break up our hit-and-run plays and outsmart all of our basemen. At times it must have looked to the general public that it was nothing short of a crime to send my kids against these masters of the diamond. Philadelphia fans believed in us and came strongly to our support, but I don't believe we could have polled a vote in our favor outside of our own city.

The baseball followers of the nation were to get the biggest shock of their lives. The series opened in Philadelphia with Chief Bender pitted against Overall, and the Athletics won, 4 to 1. The Athletics outplayed Chance's stars in all departments. Bender's pitching was so airtight that the Cubs could do nothing with him.

"All right," admitted Cub partisans, "they got this one, but it will be different when they have to watch Mordecai Brown's stuff in the next game."

In the game the next day, the Athletics refused to get off their stride. Coombs opposed Brown, winner of many vital games for the Cubs, and the Athletics won easily, 9 to 3.

By this time the Chicago cheering section was getting a bit faint. All the experts who had painted such a black picture of us before the series now admitted that we had been underrated.

The series then moved to Chicago, with a pause of a day in between for traveling. There was a surprise for the spectators when I pulled Coombs right back on the peak, and in the first game at Chicago he defeated Ed Ruelbach, 12 to 5.

That third straight victory convinced the public that only a miracle could prevent the American League from regaining baseball's highest honors.

The fourth game resulted in the solitary Chicago victory, the Cubs being forced 10 innings before they could win, 4 to 3. I always blame myself for the Athletics not winning the series in four straight games. Bender and young King Cole were the pitchers, and Cole was relieved by Brown in the eighth. In the ninth inning the score was 3 to 2 in our favor, with the bases full and only one out. It was Ira Thomas' turn to bat and I looked around the bench and told Hartsel to swing his bats and get ready to go in and pinch for Thomas.

ALMOST FOUR STRAIGHT

Hartsel, because of his small stature, good eye aud cool head was one of the hardest pinch hitters in the league for a curver to deal with. All through the season he had helped us by drawing passes in a pinch. I figured that he could work the pitcher for a pass, force in a run and, with the bases still full, I would trust to Bender getting another run in on a long fly.

Thomas jumped up from his seat and loudly objected.

"Connie, let me bat," he exclaimed. "I'll start the runners on a hit-and-run play and push one through the hole. I know I can do it."

The passion with which Ira made these remarks won me over, so I recalled Hartsel and sent Thomas to the plate. Instead of giving the runners the hit-and-run sign and getting them in motion, Thomas blazed away at the first pitch. Brown snapped it up and there was a quick double play and the inning ended. The Cubs tied the score in the ninth and won in the tenth.

DUQUESNE BOWS IN DEDICATION GRID GAME

Duquesne High dedicated its new football field yesterday afternoon and, while the home favorites bowed to Washington High in a fast game, 7-6, the big outpouring of student fans and other townspeople enjoyed the afternoon immensely.

A parade through the downtown section, participated in by about 2,000 student marchers, featured the preliminary festivities. Arriving at the field an impressive program was carried out previous to the play of the ball. School board officials made speeches, the ceremonies winding up with a flag-raising.

OFFICIALS ATTEND

L. H. Wilmot, president of the athletic council, was master of ceremonies. Col. G. J. Bryan, president of the school board, and C. H. Wolford, superintendent of the schools, made the principal addresses. Danny Nirella's band added much to the big occasion.

The dedication day game was a corker in some respects. The crack Washington eleven had to open up its best bag of tricks to gain a decision over the aggressive Duquesne fighters.

Washington scored a touchdown in the first period after recovering an enemy fumble. The try for point was good. The lineup:

Washington—7.		Duquesne—6.
Humphries	L.E.	Kozy
Jurkowsky	L.T.	Karpowich
J. Anderson	L.G.	Nutt

FEATURES AT SCHOOL GAMES

COOK, OF STOWE, SCORES ON PASS AGAINST BRADDOCK

Members of the school board of Duquesne present at the dedication exercises of the Duquesne Athletic Field, yesterday. Duquesne lost the football game feature of the occasion to Washington High, 7-0, which, however, failed to dampen the home fans' ardor. Stowe High was a 26-7 victor over Braddock in a game on the Stowe field.

VIN RICHARDS TO QUIT

BOSTON, Oct. 11.—(AP.)—Vincent Richards, present holder of the American professional tennis title, yesterday announced he would retire from that game Monday.

Richards and Kozeluh will clash for the fifth time this year tonight on the Boston Arena's specially constructed indoor court after dividing their previous 1930 matches.

BERG BEATS PETROLLE

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—(AP.)—A windstorm of leather swept through the Garden last night and gave Jackie (Kid) Berg, sensational British lightweight, a 10-round victory over Billy Petrolle, known as the Fargo Express, and the only man ever to give the White Chapel whirlwind a real lathering in this country.

While 11,600 of the faithful roared with delight at the ceaseless punching, Berg belted out a clean-cut decision over the heavy hitter from the West who once scored a five-round technical knockout over him in Chicago.

PROS IN EXHIBITION

Emil Loeffler, of Oakmont, and Walter Loeffler, of South Hills, will play Fred Baroni, of Stanton Heights, and Nelson Zimmerman, of Wildwood, in an exhibition match tonight at 8 o'clock on the miniature golf course at 5001 Baum boulevard.

MANDELL TOPS TRIPPE

BUFFALO, Oct. 11.—Sammy Mandell, former world lightweight champion, won a decision last night from Joe Trippe, of Buffalo, in an uneventful 10-round bout.

PITT SET FOR REDCATS

changes and switches will be made in the lineup from time to time.

Coach Gordon Locke, the former Iowa All-America fullback, who is mentoring the Redcat eleven, is not set on his starting team and won't be much before game time. He has exactly 11 lettermen remaining from last year's team, but some of these boys haven't come through so well this year and, as a result, have been shunted to the second team. The Redcat mentor has been working with Rebman and Ratner at the guards, Moss and Davis at the tackles, White and Silberman at the ends and Solomovitz at center, during the past week, but even this forward wall lineup is not definite. In the backfield were various combinatins tried in an effort to find one able to advance the ball with some degree of consistency. Kelly, Saxe, Spohn and Franz have shown some improvement.

LARRY MADG EASILY BEATS BELMONT

Jimmy Belmont, of Braddock, with three straight knockout victories under his belt, went back to his old cautious manner of boxing after tasting the sting of another good puncher, Larry Madge, of Cleveland, and, as a result, finished well on the short end of their 10-round melee at the Moose Temple last night, although one of the judges, Red Robinson, called it a draw. Judge Frank Brown and Referee Al Grayber rightly voted for Madge.

Belmont won only the third round, in which he dropped Madge with a left hook for a count of two, after having been on the floor himself the round before, and the first and ninth rounds were even. Madge hooked and swung viciously and always made Belmont respect him. Incidentally, Larry was in the best physical condition he ever has shown in a bout here and went the route in fine style. He scaled 145½ pounds against 147½ for Belmont.

Jimmy Reed, of Erie, 134, was too smart for Johnny Bmackey, of Canonsburg, 137½, and handily won the decision in the other 10-round bout. Reed won hands down, although he loafed in spots and thereby drew the ire of Referee Grayber, who handled all of the bouts.

The best bout of the card was the second one, in which Muscle Scholes, of the North Side, came back after being floored for a count of four in the first round and finishing that session in a groggy condition and fought Tiger Joe Clark, Negro, of the South Side, 137½, off his feet to win by a technical knockout when the referee called a halt near the end of the fourth round, after Clark has been down for a count of three and was helpless. The fight was a whirlwind affair and drew an ovation from the crowd.

Johnny Haggerty, of Lawrenceville, 125, subbing on short notice for Elmer Waner, of the North Side, took a beating from Doc Frazier, Negro, of Herron Hill, 130, in the six-round opener. At that, it required the referee's decision to decide it, Judge Robinson voting a draw and Judge Brown for Haggerty.

The gate was fair in size. Tommy Grant and Max Zeugschmidt were the timers. Ray Eberle did the announcing and Dr. M. R. Goldman was the commission physician in charge.

Between Rounds

Tom Heeney, the Australian heavyweight, who meets Emmett Rocco, of Ellwood City, in the main bout at Motor Square Garden Monday night, will not arrive until the morning of the show, as he did when he boxed George Panka at the Meyers Bowl recently.

Paul Balint will box Joey Katkish and Frankie Portland will take on Sol Lippo in the six-round bouts at the Etna Moose Club's opening show, next Wednesday night. Joey Thomas, of Chicago, and Soldier Dombroski, of Detroit, are in the main bout and Georgie Bretach and Georgie Peck in the semi-final.

Billy Brent will box Georgie Chambers and Cowboy DeLuca will take on Freddie Edwards in the double windup at the Moose Temple next Friday night. Jimmy Kelly also will be on the card.

Lloyd Clements and Nick Pelis meet in a return bout in half of the double windup billing at McKeesport next Thursday night.

MISTRIAL AGAIN

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—(AP.)—For the second time in as many weeks, the $700,000 damage suit of Edward J. Livingstone, of Toronto, Canada, against Maj. Frederic McLaughlin, owner of the Chicago Blackhawk hockey team, was declared a mistrial yesterday.

HORSEWOMAN RESIGNS

LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 11.—(AP.)—Elizabeth Daingerfield, nationally known horsewoman, has resigned as manager of Faraway Farms and caretaker of Man O' War, "The Horse of the Century," she announced here last night.

BOSTON, Oct. 11.—(AP.)—The Boston Garden has announced that Johnny Risko,

Long's Sport Comment

smartest managers in baseball, one of the finest sportsmen he has ever met, and a great pick-up for the American League.

Johnson adds that when he learned McCarthy had been deposed by the Chicago National League club in favor of Rogers Hornsby he telegraphed Owner William Wrigley, Jr., that he had made a fatal mistake. Since then, he says, he has been told that Wrigley was not to blame, and that McCarthy was removed at the instance of President William Veeck, who manages Wrigley's baseball affairs.

Harry Stuhldreher.

ONE OF THE most colorful football teams in the country this fall is that of Villanova, coached by Harry Stuhldreher, former all-America quarterback at Notre Dame and, who, with Elmer Layden, Jimmy Crowley and Don Miller, made up the famous Four Horsemen. Twelve members of the squad stand six feet or more in height and weigh around 200 pounds. The tallest is Dixie Sheehan, of Danvers, Mass., who towers 6 feet 4 inches and scales 198. Sheehan is only one of the names that give the Villanova outfit an Irish complexion, as the squad includes also a Connelly, a Keough, a Bradley, a McLaughlin, a Carey and a Donovan. This district is well represented on the team, as Capt. Cletus Gardner, fullback, hails from Carnegie; Halfback Harry Geisler, son of County Detective John Geisler, from Crafton, and Marty Gezzer, center, from Charleroi.

IT DOESN'T MATTER to a real football team whether it is playing abroad or at home. It can win in the enemy's land just as well as on its own field, and the Dukes proved they are very much on the "real" order by their 7-to-6 victory over Loyola University under the floodlights in Chicago.

An odd coincidence is that when Duquesne and Loyola met in Pittsburgh last season the Bluff boys won by the same score. They have a knack possessed by few teams of getting that extra point when it is urgently needed in a pinch. Elmer Layden's lads beat a good team in Loyola, and the victory is another big step toward a fine record for the season.

GEORGETOWN VICTOR OVER BOBCATS

CLEVELAND, Oct. 11.—A Crimson juggernaut from Grove City rolled over a gritty John Carroll eleven for about a mile of yardage under the blazing electric lights at Luna Stadium last night, but the Blue Streak line was impregnable when its goal line was threatened and the lads from Northwestern Pennsylvania had to be content with a 6-to-0 victory.

A 50-yard forward fling, Freddie Pusch to Tommy Shupe, advanced the Grove City stalwarts to Carroll's five-yard line in the third period and from there Shupe plunged over in two rushes for the only score of the bitterly contested struggle.

After that score the Crimson ball carriers continued to rip holes through the Blue Streak defense, but were stopped in their tracks when they reached the shadow of the Carroll goal posts.

Twice the Grove City tractor plowed its way to the Carroll two-yard stripe, but the fighting Irish held for downs.

Pusch and Shupe were the Grove City ground-gainers, the two Crimson backs breaking through the Streaks' line for yardage throughout the game. Culotta, Amico and Gibbons did the running for Carroll.

The victory was Grove City's third in four games with the Blue Streaks. The other contest resulted in a tie. The lineup:

BOBCATS BEATEN

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—(INS.)—Georgetown University gridders celebrated the initial after-dark football game at Griffith Stadium last night by romping away from West Virginia Wesleyan and winning, 67 to 12, from their old foes.

The district Hilltoppers went into the lead in the first minute of play, when Quarterback Johnny Scalzi took the Wesleyan kickoff on his own five-yard line and zigzagged his way through the entire Wesleyan eleven for a touchdown. Twenty thousand people attended.

HURRICANE VICTOR

ALLIANCE, O., Oct. 11.—(AP.)—Davis and Elkins College trampled Mt. Union's football team here last night, 44 to 12, after the score was tied, 12-12, in the half. It was the first victory of the year for the Scarlet Hurricane, which has tasted defeat in previous games with North Dakota Aggies and North Dakota University.

Corzine, D. & E. fullback, was the star of the visiting lineup, four touchdowns being credited to him. The lineup:

Mt. Union—12.		D. & E.—44.
Daly	L.E.	Kepner
Stump	L.T.	Gilpherson
B. Smith	L.G.	Gurneau
Boyle	C.	Kapp
Nagy	R.G.	Fairbanks
Sweet	R.T.	Ervin
Rober	R.E.	Vest
Goss	Q.	Hawley
Callahan	L.H.	Whitfield
Montecalvo	R.H.	Shelton
Grimes	F.	Corzine

Score by periods:

Mt. Union	0	12	0	0—12
D. & E.	6	6	20	12—44

D. & E. scoring: Touchdowns—Corzine 4, Smith, Talbott, Irvin. Mt. Union scoring: Touchdowns—Grimes, Montecalvo. Referee—Hamilton, Notre Dame. Umpire—Carr, West Virginia University. Linesman—Frye, Oberlin.

DUKES BEAT LOYOLA, 7-6

The quick off-tackle thrusts of Furchess and Molloy were plugged effectually, but frame one came to conclusion and seance two was well under way ere the decisive Laydenite stroke was given.

Molloy's punts were proving more vertical than lateral, always a bad situation, as the combat wore on. Presently one descended on the Maroon 42—though this indeed was not particularly to be criticized as Smoke Abele had a moment earlier laid one to rest on the Loyola six-mark and Molloy was forced to kick from well back in the nether zone.

Kovalcheck dented mid-line for a yard. Ted Todd, blond right halfback, was blanked at left tackle, whereupon a double forward pass, Todd to Benedict to Kovalcheck, netted 27 yards over center, Kass pulling a catch that sparkled to cop first down on the Loyola 14. McClellan's desperate right tackle lunge saved score then and there.

Kovalcheck split center for two and Todd turned left end for as many more. Todd went at the short side of the line for no advance, and the resourceful Hillmen, again called on to take the air, once more put to excellent effect their double pass, forward pass formation, Todd handing the pigskin to Benedict, who threw diagonally over right wing to Devinney, the speeding Bud being run out of bounds for first down just three yards shy of the goal.

Kovalcheck was spilled in the line and the Dukes, in motion on the attempt, were penalized five yards to the eight mark. Loyola took time and Drugya replaced Casey at fullback for the Ramblers.. Devinney, nearly brought to earth behind the line of scrimmage, cut miraculously away at end and was run out on the right after a four-yard excursion. Benedict carved out two at right end.

DUKES SCORE

At this juncture Layden injected Sullivan, chock-full of instructions, into the milling at Devinney's quarterback post. Benedict failed at right tackle and fourth down it was with two big ones still to be traversed as Smith relieved Drugya at fullback for Loyola.

Here Sullivan, according to his own statement of the stunt, ordered the fullback-around play. Kovalcheck swung in short arc to take the pellet from the diminutive Red, but something happened! Faulty, perhaps, was the timing. At any rate, Sullivan found himself with the pigskin in his paws and Kass ripped by with nothing in his grasp—and quick-thinking Westinghouse Larry spun 'round to the right, whirled left end and sprinted across the line to knot the joust. Kovalcheck's placement, with Sullivan handling the ball, was low and true over the bar—and right there the tilt was in.

Sport Vignettes

With Georgia Tech battling Carnegie Tech at the Stadium today, the thoughts of local football fans travel back a decade to the three meetings between the Golden Tornado and Pitt at Forbes Field all of which were won by Pitt, two of them largely through the brilliant work of Halfback Tom Davies, whom the Southerners loudly proclaimed the greatest back of the times. . . . And remember the great ballyhoo over the famous Heisman jump shift play, which was stopped dead by the wily tactics of the Pop Warner-coached Pitties? . . . Al Singer, the lightweight champion, boxes Eddie Mack in the Chicago Stadium next Tuesday night, but the promoters look to King Levinsky, the Jewish light-heavyweight former fish scaler, to draw more fans than the titleholder for his semi-final bout with Tom Kirby, of Boston, for the Kingfish only recently scored a surprising knockout victory over Leo Lomski out there.

Young Corbett, the southpaw uncrowned welterweight champion, of Fresno, Cal., is the greatest drawing card on the coast these days. . . . He drew a throng of 10,000 for his recent bout with Sammy Jackson, new Negro star, at Los Angeles, and, spurning a $5,000 guarantee to gamble on the gate, dragged down $6,000 for his end, his second largest purse. He got $10,000 for an outdoor battle with Jackie Fields last February.

Buster Keaton denies that Ernest Orsatti, of the Cardinals, who resembles him in the matter of sad physiognomy, ever doubled for him in the movies, as been written so often . . . Jimmy Gelbert, 15-year-old brother of Charley, the Cards' shortstop ace, prefers tennis to any other sport. Next comes basketball, baseball and football. He's going to enter Franklin and Marshall College . . . Feg Murray, the sports cartoonist, is the former Stanford University star hurdler and held the National A. A. Three names on the Georgia Tech roster this year have an old familiar ring . . . They are those of Barron, Flowers and Fincher . . . . Two of them are brothers of stars who competed against Pitt in the days gone by . . . . Sam Fincher, sub guard and tackle, is a brother of the great Bill Fincher, now line coach of the Tornado, who rated all-America acclaim in his playing days . . . . Pat Barron is the last of the Barrons, his brothers, Red and Carter, having served ol' Tech with honor . . . Like the first two Barrons, Pat is a halfback . . . . Strange as it may seem, Buck Flowers is not related at all to the original Buck Flowers and is called Buck simply because the first Flowers was so designated.—HARRY KECK.

MOHAWKS PLAY HOMEWOOD

Homewood and their traditional rivals, the Lawrenceville Mohawks, will inaugurate indoor independent football this evening at the Armory, Emerson and Alder streets. Both clubs have a large following, and Manager Hermann, who is staging the game, expects to pack in a big crowd.

It is the intention of the East Enders to stage a game at the Armory every Saturday evening during the season and bring the best attractions possible for the fans. Tonight's game will find Hooks Carroll and Ziggy Anderson, classed as two of the best quarterbacks in the independent ranks, meeting on the gridiron for the first time. Both are real triple-threat men.

SNYDER WINS ON FOUL

CHICAGO, Oct. 11—(AP.)—Otto Von Porat, lanky Norwegian, returning to heavyweight competition after four months' layoff, lost on a foul in the first round of his scheduled eight round bout with Angus Snyder, Dodge City, Kansas, in the coliseum last night.

Von Porat, failing to hear the bell at the end of the first round, continued to rip punches to Snyder's head and body. Snyder was trapped in Von Porat's corner and fell a victim to a hard right smash to the chin that dropped him in his tracks. He was unable to gain his feet and was dragged to his corner. Thereupon Referee Eddie Purdy raised Snyder's hand in victory, although the Big Kansan was still dazed from the illegal knockout punches he received.

Fight Results

At Moose Temple—Larry [illegible] won referee's decision over Jimmy Belmont, 10 rounds; Jimmy Reed defeated Johnny [illegible], 10 rounds; [illegible] won by technical knockout over Tiger Joe Clark, 4 rounds; [illegible] won referee's decision over Johnny Haggarty, 4 rounds.

MRS. SLOAN RE-ELECTED

By VERN SWARTSFAGER.

Mrs. F. M. Sloan, of Edgewood, yesterday was re-elected to the presidency of the Women's Golf Association of Western Pennsylvania at its annual meeting in the Edgewood Country Club, which was preceded by the last women's one-day tourney of the season, won by Mrs. W. H. Duff II, of Oakmont, with a low gross of 86. The low net honors went to Mrs. Carl Van der Voort, of Shannopin, with 91-13—78.

Anna Wood, of Stanton Heights, was renamed treasurer, while Mrs. W. F. McCrady, of Edgewood, succeeds Mrs. George L. Hayes, of Oakmont, as secretary. Mrs. Hayes is a new vice president.

Mrs. H. C. Anderson, Longue Vue, and Mrs. L. H. Burnett, Pittsburgh Country Club, also were elected vice presidents.

Mrs. W. H. Duff II, Oakmont; Mrs. Chester H. Lehman, Westmoreland; Mrs. D. A. Garber, Montour Heights; Mrs. H. P. Roth, Alcoma, and Mrs. J. A. Ellen, Field Club comprise the executive board with Mrs. E. E. Arensberg, of Oakmont, chairman of the handicap committee.

Pleasant Valley Plays Oakland

The Pleasant Valley Smilers will be the attraction tomorrow afternoon at the Frazier street grounds for the Oakland Community football team. Manager Collins, of the Oaklanders, promises a real club. The Smilers, which defeated the Irwin Mohawks in the night opening game at Jeannette last Wednesday, will provide tough opposition. The Community team intends to meet the best clubs in the district.

Cleveland heavyweight, would clash with [illegible] Daniels, of Minneapolis, in the second feature of its next boxing show here on October 23.

MASTER MYSTERIES -:- By Arthur Hoerl

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

Robin Dale goes to California to report on the case of Elsie Donahue. On the night of her wedding Elsie disappears after entering the house she had built and furnished as a new home. He interviews Roy Carroll, the husband. Elsie was last seen by Fred Wagner, a former suitor. Wagner ran after her toward the beach which fronts the house. The other wedding guests followed. Both Elsie and Wagner disappeared. A launch was heard leaving the small dock. Carroll thought his wife was going to their yacht. The launch was returned in a mysterious manner. Elsie never went near the yacht. Carroll believed his wife had run off with Wagner. The morning following Dale's interview the body of Elsie is washed up on shore. It has been in the water about 10 days. This coincides with the wedding date. Later, death is found to be due to strychnine poisoning. Fred Wagner was leaving his position. He was going to his home in St. Louis. Police are watching there without result. Elsie leaves no will. Her large estate will descend to her husband. Carroll insists upon turning it over to Elsie's mother and sister. He does not feel entitled to it. Fred Wagner's body is washed up on shore.

Now go on with the story.

CHAPTER VI.

"It's Wagner, all right," Franks said after examining the body.

The thing was a ghastly sight. Words are not adequate to describe it. One of the men had been hurriedly dispatched for Dr. Alwyn. Dale saw enough to convince him that a heavy rope had been lashed across the middle of the body, a rope to which a weight had apparently been fastened and which the detonations had loosened.

They covered the thing and stood in a group some distance from it. Franks explained to Sherid that it had resulted from Dale's suggestion.

"It's merely a theory, Mr. Sherid. One of the important factors in it was the manner of Fred Wagner's end. I believe you'll learn that he was not drowned, but thrown into the water after death. The confusing feature was the failure of either of the bodies to come to the surface at a period early enough to be in keeping with the conditions.

"Poe made a careful analysis of a similar situation and wrote a brief but thorough treatise on it. Simply, the specific gravity of the human body is practically the same as that of water. In other words, the quantity of water displaced by a body when almost completely submerged is equal in weight to the body itself.

"For that reason the human body floats when completely submerged and only, let us say, the lips and nostrils free with the head thrown back. This condition will be upset when a leg or an arm is uplifted, for that additional weight is thrown, figuratively, on the scale, for the uplifted portion no longer displaces water and the body sinks.

"Also when a person is drowning he permits water instead of air to get into his lungs, usually thrashing about frenziedly, upsetting the hairline equilibrium which would permit the body to float. A drowned person, because of the volume of water taken internally, usually sinks and does not come to the surface until gases have been formed sufficiently to offset this and again lower the specific gravity. At such time it rises to the surface, unless enmeshed at the bottom. Vibration, such as dynamiting or firing a cannon will very often be sufficient to release the body.

"However, a person who is dead before being placed in the water does not, we may call it, inhale water. The fact of the matter is that such a body will float on the surface unless a heavy weight is attached to cause it to sink.

"Stop to consider, then, that Elsie Carroll was dead before being thrown into the water. Add to this the fact that a person who is poisoned is apt to generate internal gas more quickly than another. What happened should then give us a very tangible clue."

Robin Dale paused. They had been so interested in his discourse that they had failed to note the arrival of Dr. Alwyn. Dale motioned toward the body that lay on the sand.

"I see that Dr. Alwyn is making an examination," Dale continued. "I'm very anxious to learn whether Fred Wagner was dead before being thrown into the water. I think it will have a great bearing on the case. If he was drowned it will completely upset a theory that I've tried to make the conditions fit. Usually it's a case of fitting a theory to conditions—but in this case there were none, or, at least, they were so completely hidden as to be utterly imperceptible—so conditions had to be manufactured to fit a theory.

"If Wagner was drowned, I'm afraid I'll never be able to prove the theory—it will appear too overwhelmingly like murder and suicide. But here comes the doctor; we'll soon find out."

Dr. Alwyn came slowly toward the group. Franks and Sherid were keenly anxious to hear what the doctor had to say. He had hardly joined the group when Sherid questioned him.

Sherid and Franks exchanged glances. They both turned to Dale for a moment. Then Sherid faced the doctor again.

"Anything else?"

"Been in the water longer than the other body—over 10 days. Held down by some weight bound about the midsection—there's a very plain mark of the rope."

Prosecutor Sherid turned abruptly to Dale.

"Just as you said. Seems your theory's proved out. Who is it?"

"There's still a few points in question, Mr. Sherid, before I'd dare offer to accuse anyone. I'm going to drive to Los Angeles at once. I'll want to telephone you from there."

"It's nearly five now. I'll not be later than eight, in any event. By eleven I'll be back. I think, by then, we can talk it over."

Some time after seven, Robin Dale arrived at a small apartment house on Alvardo street, in Los Angeles. It was where Edward Norcross resided. That gentleman, fortunately, was at home.

"There are a few questions I'd like to ask," Dale said, after introducing himself and explaining what had happened that day. "I hope you won't mind answering."

"If there's anything I can tell you, although I'm afraid I won't be of much help."

"When you captured Miss Louise in your arms you believed, of course, it was her sister?"

Norcross was greatly embarrassed when he realized that his actions had become known to others.

"Yes—I—it was a terrible thing to do, but I was deeply in love with Elsie. I couldn't seem to realize it was all over between us. There was a time I thought she loved me."

"When the others ran off in search of a launch where did you go?"

"I went with them at first. The truth is that I stuck closely to Carroll, believing he knew where Elsie went; that he would lead us to her side. In a short time I felt he knew as little as we did. The crowd was spread out so it was easy for me to turn and go back without attracting attention. I went to the house, wandered about the garden, hoping she might return. After a bit I went toward the beach. I had walked a mile or so to the north and upon returning saw Louise, who I then thought was Elsie, coming off the dock. You know the rest."

"Prior to that you had seen no one?"

"While I was near the house there had not been a soul."

"This is a peculiar question; you may answer it or not. If you loved Elsie would you rather have seen her dead than married to anyone else?"

"I can answer that. Above everything else I wanted to marry her. Not because of her money, because I loved her long before she had any. But, if my happiness was to be denied, my greatest wish would have been to see her happy."

"I think we can put our finger on the guilty one—I'll be there by eleven."

"What about making the arrest? And, by the way, will you need Louise Donahue or Carroll? The Donahues have gone aboard the yacht and leave at flood. Carroll will be leaving here, too."

"No. Nothing they can do. And don't worry about the arrest. You'll be able to put your finger on the murderer whenever you want. See you at eleven. Goodbye."

(Who was guilty of the murders of Elsie Carroll and Fred Wagner? What was Dale's theory? How were the crimes committed? What was the motive? Read the solution in the Sun-Telegraph, a week from today.)

SOLUTION TO

'Murders at the Circus'

By ARTHUR HOERL

Others came from the wagons, until a stream of humanity, in all forms of undress, was dashing headlong toward the big top. Dale and detectives reached the huge steel cage first. Three lions were loose in it, snarling and fighting and roaring over a shapeless mass that lay on the ground. There were no more shrieks . . . life had passed out of that body. What was left of the clothes were rent into shreds. There was a crunching of bones and some of the women screamed hysterically. They were all ordered from the place until only those in authority remained.

Dale had been peering through the bars, now that the lights had been put on. Finally he turned away in horror. His legs felt weak and he found himself nauseated.

"No use staying around here, gentlemen—there'll be no arrest to make. A higher judgment has solved the problem. The man you were going to arrest fell into his own trap and paid for his crimes with a horrible, unspeakable death. That's Roy Swarney lying in there."

Late that night they sat in Dale's wagon and he explained how he had arrived at the truth.

"Swarney had the most to gain. I should have seen that from the start. Everything pointed toward Cap Wiegle, but that was done purposely. That was the only way Swarney could get Adele to turn against Wiegle, have him found out to be a murderous fiend. Swarney wanted her. So he first got Beller out of the way. Queen Anne must have known something about it and kept quiet for her own reasons, blackmail or something. That was why he caused the accident which resulted in Anne's death. Of course, that made it look more like Cap Wiegle than ever because he seemed to have the only reason for getting her out of the way—so he could have Adele. When this second crime apparently left Wiegle unscathed the last resort was to get Wiegle out of the way.

Swarney tried to make it look as if Wiegle had planned to do the very thing to him. Swarney, and the thing boomeranged. Remember Swarney left word that Wiegle had sent for him at the cage? Well, he knew Wiegle went to the cages every night—so Swarney got there first and opened the lions' cages, set the trap for Wiegle to walk into. He was to lie in wait and snap a lock on the outer door. What happened was that, somehow, the lock closed and Swarney was caught in his own net. He probably tried frantically to close the cage doors when he found he was locked in, but the animals were aroused and got him before he could shut them in again.

Wiegle was saved, oddly enough, by the thing that Swarney was trying to prevent—his marriage to Adele. He told me a while ago that they went into town for that purpose. If there was any doubt about Swarney's guilt it was made positive by the message he left about having been sent for by Wiegle. That was impossible for Wiegle wasn't in camp, a thing which no one could possibly have known because of the clandestine nature of Wiegle's absence. Wiegle also admitted he suspected Swarney from the start.

Dale lit a cigaret. Wright asked him what gave the definite clue to Swarney's guilt.

"He overplayed his part, as they all do, because they're so anxious to put it over. That trick of poisoning his dog did it. That, too, made me lose every possible bit of sympathy for him. You remember he did not eat any of the food. That little act was for my benefit. The waiter was positive no one had touched the food, so who could have put the poison in it but Swarney himself. He used the dog to show it's presence.

"When I got to thinking it over I couldn't find anyone with any motive to kill Swarney. So why the poison? That is when it became clear. He had sent for me in the first place, and disarmed me right from the start because of that. I remember now how he was always reticent about accusing Cap Wiegle, but he usually had me talk to someone who would implicate Wiegle.

"Except for that one mistake, trying to prove conclusively to me what I already believed, that he was innocent of the crimes and, in fact, would be a possible victim, his crimes might have remained a mystery forever. Or, worse still, someone else might have suffered the penalty for them.

"You see, Swarney had the most to gain; Adele, revenge on Wiegle and the circus, for with Adele he would have owned it all!"

Robin Dale did not speak of Beebo. He had a reason for that. The next morning he went to Beebo's wagon. He took the old man by the arm and they walked off together down the road toward the open fields.

"I didn't say anything, Beebo . . . it was what he deserved. I know you locked the door, you entangled him in his own net. It was he with Tito, wasn't it? No one need ever know. Justice, Beebo, justice is all the world wants. She'll cry a while and then forget—and some nice, decent boy will come along. Be kind to her, Beebo, and help her forget. Don't ever tell her the truth . . . that's just for you and me."

Injured by Runaway Car, Wins Damages

A verdict of $13,000 damages was awarded Mrs. Mary Ponsette, of Airbrake avenue, Wilmerding, and her husband, John Ponsette, bottling works proprietor of Wilmerding, by a jury in Common Pleas Court in their suit against the Pittsburgh Railways Company.

Mrs. Ponsette claimed damages for injuries received when she was entering a store at 816 Braddock avenue, Braddock, July 21, 1928, as a runaway street car came down Library avenue, jumped the tracks and crashed into the store.

Those Rowdy Chants.
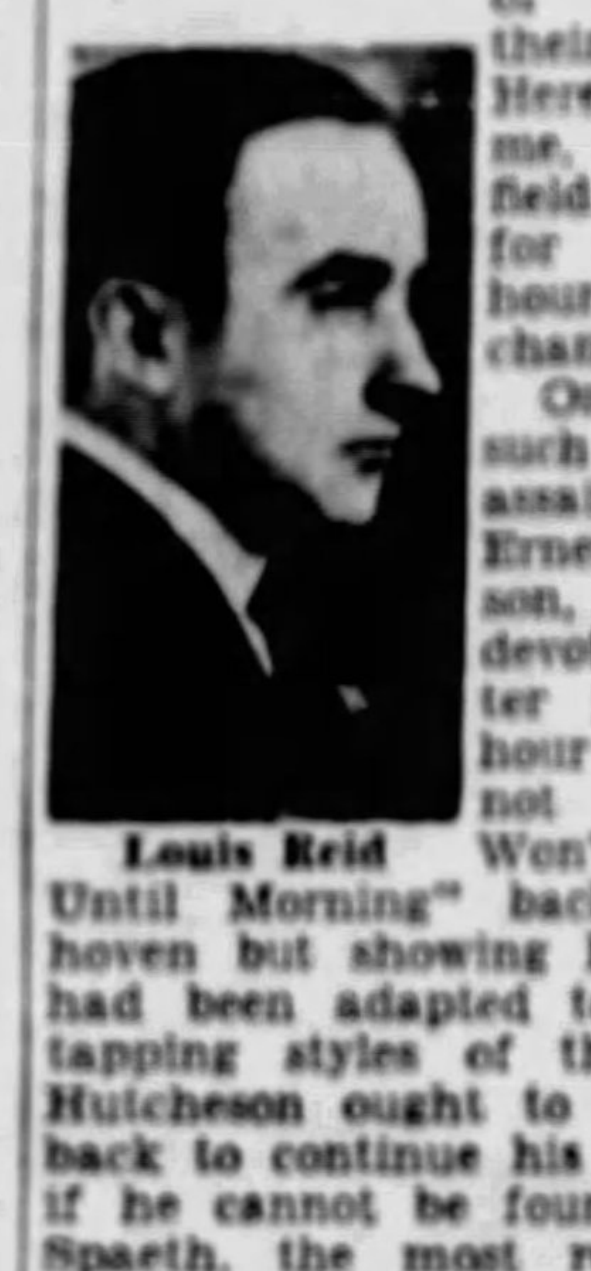
Arthur E. Bagley.
Goldman's March.

By LOUIS REID.



Louis Reid

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—The historians of the piano are seldom tempted to track the rowdy chants of America to their native lair. Here, it seems to me, is a fruitful field of research for an amusing hour on the air channels.

Only once has such an activity assailed our ears. Ernest Hutcheson, the pianist, devoted the better part of an hour to tracing not only "We Won't Go Home Until Morning" back to Beethoven but showing how Chopin had been adapted to the feet-tapping styles of the moment. Hutcheson ought to be brought back to continue his labors, and if he cannot be found Sigmund Spaeth, the most relentless of music chroniclers, should be summoned into service.

What Is the Origin Of the Rowdy Chants?

And once the historians face the microphone they might be just a little bit more painstaking in their endeavors. They might even explain that "We Won't Go Home Until Morning" really had its beginning as a French military song 800 years ago and then trace it through its use by Beethoven as a theme of a great symphony to its eventual employment as a ready inspiration to incoherent whoopee-makers. Also, they might trace "Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here" from its original home in "The Pirates of Penzance" to its gradual adoption as the theme song by the convention hall.

What of the origin of "How Dry I Am," "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight" and "Turkey in the Straw?" And who is the forgotten musical pathfinder who lifted the "Hoochie Koochie" from its long repose in Babylonian archives? And where are the men who will give the world a new musical defiance of law and order? These are questions for the broadcasters to settle. While they seek the sweet-and-lowdown of the old rowdy tunes, the radio men should also begin a movement for some new ones. It's really time we had some new ones.

Tales of the sea do not often reach the ears of the nation. I wonder why. I wonder why the shahs of the studios do not induce such men as James B. Connolly and William McFee to bring their story-telling talent to the microphones. During the recent yacht races Connolly was the center of a group of editors and reporters aboard the newspaper boat.

Time hung heavily upon them until Connolly began to narrate some of his adventures of the sea. He spun yarn after yarn while the hard-boiled reporters listened pop-eyed and open-mouthed — stories of storms and rescues and racing down the wind. He made them feel that they were fellow-participants in his experiences. And they say it was he who inspired the newswriters to file such thrilling stories of a race that was utterly devoid of any thrilling quality.

Connolly should be summoned to repeat his tales for the armchairs. And let him be called on a night when the wind is blowing a gale and a good nor'easter beats against the window pane.

Sea Stories Seldom Told on the Radio

The best sea story yet to be given to the radio was that told by Chief Officer Manning, of the America, when he described the rescue of the crew of the Florida. Manning possesses a sense of the dramatic. He chooses his words, he pauses well. There are other skippers who could, if they would, tell great tales of the sea—such men as Sir Arthur Rostron, who commanded the Carpathia when she raced to the scene of the Titanic sinking; Cunningham, of the Leviathan, and Fried, of the America, once he subdued his microphonic fright.

The height of endurance on the radio, it seems to me, belongs to those men who conduct the health exercises in the morning hours. The best known of the exercise dispensers on the air is Arthur E. Bagley, of the N. B. C. As a talker he is in a class by himself—a veritable Niagara of words.

Edwin Franko Goldman, the busiest bandmaster on the air, points to his famous march "On the Mall" as an example that a musician isn't necessarily a good judge of what the public wants. Goldman considered it at his rehearsals the worst piece of music he had ever written. Nor would he play it for the concert at the dedication of the bandstand in Central Park for which it was specially written.

Several weeks later he decided to play the march as an encore, without announcing its name.

"I almost fell off the stand," he said, "when applause roared out at the end of the selection. So I played it again and this time I had a boy hold up a placard which gave the name of the selection. Since then 'On the Mall' has been played at every concert I've given. But I still have my doubts about its musical merit."

RULES

Proper nouns, slang, and words that offend good taste cannot be used. SCORING: The first and last letters of each word do not count as strokes. A longer or shorter word can be substituted, but at a penalty. If a longer word is used, each letter above par counts as a stroke; if a shorter word is used, each letter below par counts as a stroke. If player cannot insert a suitable word, add 3 strokes to par for hole and proceed to next hole.

The solution to this puzzle can be found on page 8.

CLUES

2—To praise.
3—Weeping.
4—A loiterer.

WE NOW PRESENT

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor

Walter Damrosch resumes conductorship of the General Electric Symphony Orchestra through WCAE at 9 o'clock tonight . . . Chicago Variety, WJAS at 10, brings to the same microphone Paul Whiteman and Ben Bernie, rival dance maestros . . . Don Bestor plays a special concert for KDKA listeners in the Far North at 11:15 . . . We don't always get a thrill out of Show Boat, but we think "Police Patrol" at 9 o'clock is keyed to stand your hair on end . . . Mayor George H. Lysle, of McKeesport, speaks in the Freedom Salute to McKeesport over KDKA at 9 . . . Ray Perkins, the "Old Topper" for Shell, WCAE at 8:30, wears a high hat into the studio for effect . . . We must not forget the Miniature Theater, KDKA at 10:30, with its production of "Woman in Chains."

A NIGHT WITH OSCAR

When he gets to his room at a downtown hotel he turns on the radio. Out comes a long chart, a box of cigarets and some chocolates. Oscar tries for new stations.

At 11 o'clock all monkey-business is halted. Oscar flips the dial to WMAQ to greet his friends Bill Hay and Amos and Andy.

All the time he entertains with a droll humor.

You'll be shocked to learn that Oscar has been arrested. It happened during the war.

Oscar had tired of studying engineering at Carnegie Tech and joined the U. S. Army. After waiting around Pittsburgh for four weeks, he decided the war would be over if he didn't soon get started, so he went to Canada and signed up with a French recruiting officer.

A few weeks later he was overseas in the French Army. Promotion was rapid for smart Americans and Oscar became a first class sergeant.

On day a bunch of American soldiers marched up to the barracks and invited Oscar to march off with them. Arrested! and court-martialed by the U. S. for desertion!

PARLEY VOUS?

In Poilu garb, Oscar had lots of fun listening to American soldiers trying to speak the French language. They would approach him with French dictionaries in hand and line off a lot of verbs, nouns and adjectives while Oscar held himself in abeyance chuckling at the wild hand waving and attempts to pronounce words.

After 10 or 15 minutes of this Oscar would flatter our doughboys by coming out with

"Well, is there anything I can do for you?" spoken in the choicest English.

QUESTION A DAY:

Will you put us straight on this W8XT station?—A. W., Monongahela, Pa.

Answer—W8XT is the experimental station of KDKA, located at Saxonburg, Pa., near Butler, Pa. Lately W8XT has been synchronizing with WEAF on 660 kilocycles. Accordingly, several people have heard WCAE program on W8XT. The license is experimental only. When you pickup W8XT you may be pleased to know that you are hearing the world's most powerful broadcasting station . . . varying from 50,000 to 400,000 watts. We think KDKA will use their Saxonburg plant with full power as part of their tenth anniversary celebration the night of November 8.

Fred Webber, of WCAE, covers a lot of territory in his announcing, and every word is clear and distinct. Last night he did the Cities Service standby announcement—261 words—in 80 seconds, or about 3.3 words a second. We understood every word.

Fred always has a bag of mints by the microphone.

* * *

Songs that have a slight resemblance: "Springtime in the Rockies" and "Where He Leads Me I Will Follow."

"Dollar Princess" and "Spaniard That Blighted My Life."

Sarasate's "Zigeunerweisen" and "Hearts and Flowers."

TODAY'S TID BIT:

It's hard to organize a good radio orchestra in New York because the best soloists earn more money "free lancing." They travel about from station to station offering their services at a high premium.

Suit Follows Death From Car Runaway

Mrs. Emma S. Hess, of Portage, seeking to recover $50,000 damages for the death of her husband, August B. Hess, when a coal car crashed into a Portage hotel, filed suit against the Pennsylvania Railroad Company in Common Pleas Court. She operated the hotel into which a runaway coal car from a branch line crashed October 17, 1929, causing the walls of the building to collapse, and fatally injuring Hess, according to the suit.

Quake Terrorizes Melfi Population

MELFI, Italy, Oct. 11.—(INS.)—A three-second earthquake panicked the population today, without causing damage. The slight shock caused hundreds to flee into the open for fear another catastrophe might occur such as was experienced some months ago.

It's SMART to be SELFISH...NOW

IF anybody ever sits down to write "Famous Mistakes in History" his whole book will all be about the things that Fuddleheads ALMOST did

... how Marshall Ney ALMOST got to Waterloo in time to save Napoleon

... how SO-and-SO, during the panic of 1893 ALMOST picked off a piece of priceless down-town real estate that was offered him for almost NOTHING. But—OH NO! Not Fuddlehead! He was too SMART to fall for that one. So another fellow, not quite so smart, DID fall for it; and today that other fellow is off the coast of Bermuda somewhere, in a comfortable deck chair, getting reports from his broker by wireless.

Right now America is full of Fuddleheads—

... people who, if they want to go UP in an elevator, miss the signals and get carried DOWN

... people who wait for the right street car on the wrong corner

... well meaning, more or less intelligent people, who try hard enough but who for some reason somehow seem never to CLICK.

NINETY days from now many a Fuddlehead will be kicking himself because he didn't have the good judgment to buy at these new record breaking, SACRIFICE PRICES.

Manufacturers the country over, in every line of production, are liquidating their stocks, in many cases at an actual loss in order to free their money for new programs which they already have under way.

Capitalize this situation—be selfish—turn it to your own personal advantage. The buyer has the breaks. For once in your life, circumstances have conspired in your favor. Your dollar never bought as much as it will right now. Incidentally you yourself know that such prices can't last. Here are just a few random examples:

... a seven passenger sedan fully equipped, well known make, greatly improved in detail and workmanship, last January at the New York Show $1200.00—now $995.00.

... a fur trimmed coat—the last word in style, finer material, finer quality in every way, eight months ago $95.00—now $69.50. More expensive coat, formerly $350.00—now $250.00.

... an eight tube radio set (well known brand) was $295.00—now greatly improved and with nine tubes—$179.00 puts it into your home.

... flour $3.00 a barrel—the lowest in twenty-five years.

Whatever else the crash did, one thing is sure! For the time being, it has definitely banished the high cost of living.

Be Smart. Be Selfish. BUY NOW!

KILLS OFFICER AFTER ARREST

PORT HURON, Mich., Oct. 11.—(AP.)—A policeman was killed and his companion wounded by one of two suspected bandits whom they were taking to police headquarters.

The dead policeman was Roy Shambleau. He was shot through the head when Russell McComis, 18, Detroit, drew a gun which he had succeeded in concealing when he was searched. The wounded officer was Lieut. Thomas Hastings. He has a wound in his hand, also from McComis' gun.

Shambleau died at the first shot and the car careened over the curb. As it stopped, McComis and Macklam jumped out and ran. Patrolman Richard Holberg, who had made the arrest, was following in another car. He fired once at the fleeing prisoners and they stopped and submitted to arrest again.

RESCUE BRINGS ROYAL MEDAL

LONDON.—(Universal.)—The King Edward Medal for gallantry in life-saving has been awarded by King George to Thomas Pearson Fleming and Nicholas Whitehead, humble workmen, for their feat in retrieving a fainting man from the top of a 163-foot factory chimney.

Thomas Brewis, a painter, was busy at his craft on a stack when he suddenly lost consciousness. In falling one foot caught in the ropes of his bosun's chair and he was seen dangling head down.

Fleming, on a scaffolding almost 100 feet below the unconscious painter, climbed the vertical iron ladder set in the chimney and supported Brewis' body. Whitehead, a 17-year-old painter's assistant, meanwhile, climbed to the top of the chimney with a safety belt with which he and Fleming clewed the unconscious man safely in the bosun's chair.

Care in Cotton Picking Aids Price

CLEMSON COLLEGE, S. C.—(AP.)—Farmers lose enormous sums each year on their cotton crops because of lack of care in picking, says R. W. Hamilton, extension agronomist here.

He urges farmers to pick cotton as soon as the bolls open and the lint "fluffs," but never while it is wet. It should not be ginned immediately, he says, but stored loosely under shelter to allow drying out of excess moisture and an equalization of natural moisture.

NOTICE

Increase of Bond Indebtedness

Notice is hereby given to the electors of the School District of the City of Clairton, Allegheny County, Pennsylvania, that pursuant to a resolution of the Board of Directors of said School District, duly passed by said Board at its meeting held on October 7, 1930, a

Special Public Election Will Be Held in said School District on Tuesday, November 4, 1930, at the usual places provided for holding general elections, between the hours of 7:00 O'Clock A. M. and 7:00 O'Clock P. M. for the purpose of obtaining the assent of said electors to the increase of the indebtedness of the School District of the City of Clairton, in the sum of

Two Hundred and Ten Thousand Dollars ($210,000)

Said increase of indebtedness being for the purpose of construction of grade school building on land fronting on Locust street and remodeling Walnut Street school building for Junior High School, in First Ward of said School District, and said sum is sufficient for such purposes.

The increase of indebtedness upon which the electors will vote at said time, place and election, will be Two Hundred Ten Thousand Dollars ($210,000.00), and for such purpose the following statement is made:

STATEMENT

FIRST—The last preceding assessed valuation of the taxable property in said School District of the City of Clairton is Twenty-five Million, Ninety-two Thousand, Five Hundred Seventy Dollars ($25,092,570.00).

SECOND—The actual existing bonded indebtedness of said School District of the City of Clairton is One Million One Hundred Sixty-one Thousand, Five Hundred Dollars ($1,161,500.00).

THIRD—The amount of the proposed increase of indebtedness in said School District of the City of Clairton is Two Hundred Ten Thousand Dollars ($210,000.00).

FOURTH—The percentage of the proposed increase is [illegible] per cent plus of the last preceding assessed valuation of the taxable property in said School District and should said increase of indebtedness be made, the total indebtedness will be [illegible] plus per cent of said assessed valuation.

FIFTH—The purpose for which the indebtedness is to be increased is the construction of grade school building on land fronting on Locust street the sum of One Hundred Seventy Thousand Dollars ($170,000.00) and remodeling Walnut Street School building for Junior High School the sum of Forty Thousand Dollars ($40,000.)

I. A. NICHOLAS,

DAILY TRUE STORY

The Broken Lock

"It's the gum log beehive, under th' sycamore by th' spring house," Pop Meserve said as he examined the painting.

"You c'n almost smell them hollyhocks," Ma, Meserve declared.

"She's smart—it's wonderful how she pinches colors out of little tubes and makes such pictures with them." Chet exclaimed, enthusiastically.

Chet was Pop and Ma Meserve's only son.

For more than six months Mavis Sutton had lived with the Meserves. She came up in the mountain district from a distant lowland state because her doctors advised it. She didn't make a very great deal of money with her paintings, but more than enough to live on.

The Meserves liked her, in a way. To be sure, she wasn't "one of us," as they say of all people who do not live in their own districts, but she was pleasant and good and pretty.

There were only Pop and Ma, their son, Chet, and Cora, in the family.

Cora was a very quiet girl. She never went anywhere away from the home, never went down to the log church or to any of the local gatherings.

Mavis often wondered why Cora seemed so quiet and sad. She was quite a pretty girl, worked faithfully at home and there was no doubt but what her folks loved her. Mavis thought, however, that there was a trace of pity in their love.

Mavis Mistaken

Mavis Sutton had paid little attention to Chet Meserve when she first went there, sent by Doctor Sawyer who was a relative of Ma Meserve. Chet had "schoolin'." He had been through the academy down at Johnson City.

At first Mavis thought Chet was like so many of the other mountain boys who dragged through life getting a mere pittance from the mountain farms, who went hunting a great deal, drank a lot of moonshine and avoided as much work as possible.

She found that she was mistaken.

Although there was a rifle over the fireplace, Chet never went hunting.

The Meserve place was the neatest in that region, with the exception of the Dole place. Howard Dole wasn't a native, but had come there and built a place where he lived a few weeks in the spring trout fishing time and at least three months in the quail and wild turkey shooting season. Dole was wealthy and had come from the Middle West.

But Chet had fallen in love with Mavis Sutton!

For a long while he never let her suspect. But when Mavis began to realize that Chet was a splendid young man and as good and industrious and kind as he was husky, she paid more attention to him.

Family Objects

It didn't take them long to find out, after this, that they were very much in love.

Chet wasn't surprised that his good father and mother did not approve. Their ideal was a native mountain girl who could cook and sew and do a "reg'lar woman's chores" about a farm.

"It's just a trick, Chet, like them jugglers and such, making pict'res with them paints. It ain't smart. A smart gal, Chet, is a gal who can corn down hog meat, make bread an' biscuits, grind hominy, make bed quilts and do what any real woman was intended fer to do."

Chet was terribly distressed.

Mavis wondered when Chet was going to speak of marriage. She didn't doubt his love and thought he was just careless about discussing a date for the happy event.

Cora had a little talk with Chet. Mavis overheard it, but didn't understand it at all. It made the quiet, sad-faced girl more of a mystery than ever to Mavis.

Things went along about as usual.

Mavis was over on the ridge road one forenoon, painting the view of Chimney Rock. Through the clearing she could see the Howard Dole place. There was smoke coming from the chimney.

Mavis caught sight of Cora down below, after late blackberries. She was going to call to her when she saw Cora staring at the Dole place and then turn and hurry away. Mavis thought nothing of it then. Later Chet Meserve came up the road below. He had the rifle with him. Mavis had never seen him with it before.

Chet came nearer and reached the Dole house yard when a man came out. He wore city clothes. She heard Chet call to him. He went over.

Cora was staring through the brush toward the Dole house.

"Oh," Mavis said, "it was murder—cold blooded murder—to think that Chet—"

She shuddered.

"Miss Sutton," Cora said, pulling away Mavis' arm that she had put over her eyes as if to hide the memory of what she had seen, "I don't reckon it was murder."

"But I saw—I saw it all."

"So did I. I run back and told Chet he had come back and I followed Chet down here and watched him. S'pose you was Chet and I was your sister and just 16 and that man he—he met me out here and he took advantage of me?"

Mystery Solved

Mavis looked at her a moment and then all the mystery about Cora Meserve was solved.

"They got more law now—Chet will be hung dead fer it, I know he will," Cora said, "but he had to do it."

When Mavis got back Chet and his Pop and Ma were in solemn conference.

"I saw it all—I cannot blame Chet—and I want you to all swear he didn't do it—there's no proof," Mavis said.

"I can't get away with it—if I hid the gun they'd know I used to have one," Chet said.

But he promised to deny everything.

About sunset the sheriff from Johnson City came over with the local deputy.

"There's some as say you had reason to kill Dole," the sheriff said to Chet.

"I have nothing against Dole," Chet declared, and added under his breath, "now."

"You killed him with this, I reckon?" The sheriff took down the gun as Chet calmly denied the killing.

"Doggone—look here—the lock is broken offen this gun, been broke off a long time I reckon, see it's all rusted where it broke off," the sheriff said. The deputy examined it and agreed.

"Reckon it must have been some tramp who killed Dole," the sheriff said, and they went their way.

Chet examined the gun. The lock, the "hammer"—was broken short off and the break badly rusted. And Chet had fired that gun six hours before. He rubbed his fingers over the break. Something came off on his finger—brown paint!

"Mavis," Chet said suddenly, "you seen me? You busted that lock and painted that rust on, didn't you?"

"Yes, Chet!"

Chet turned to his Pop and Ma.

"Didn't I tell you she was a smart girl?" he asked.

WITH FRISBY THROUGH DARKEST AFRICA

Frisby at Bay!

"What did you see in darkest Africa and what was the purpose of your trip?" some may ask.

Friends, I can answer these thus—

The purpose of my trip was —

1. To get the natives to adopt daylight saving.

2. To induce the various native chieftains to protect wild game.

3. To introduce schools, roads, churches and string electric light globes through darkest Africa.

I also went there to study the advisability of establishing chain stores. In a word, I wanted to open up, or Frisbyize, the country.

However, I must say that the chieftains were a very ugly lot to get along with, owing to the fact that I could not understand their jibberish, while they were impatient and sullen when I tried to explain my mission. In fact, the conferences usually ended in a lot of off color story telling that incensed me, as there is nothing that I hate worse than a snappy story told by a practical stranger at first meeting in a foreign tongue which I cannot understand. The chieftains are so sensitive, however, that I listened intently, striving to catch the point, and laughed heartily rather than offend them, as it would have been folly for me to anger these hot headed folk who did not hesitate to strike me as I slept, unable to defend myself, but good-natured through it all, as I have found it is better to heed the old saying—

Every thing is dandy if you'll
Smile, smile, smile!

SHE DOES THE WORK OF A HAY WAGON

The American Weekly, with nearly 6,000,000 circulation every Sunday, by far the greatest circulation in the world, pays, as it should, especial attention to the mothers of men. It pays attention, also to the DAUGHTERS, the SISTERS, the WIVES and the SWEETHEARTS of men.

In the American Weekly, which forms part of tomorrow's edition of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph, you will be specially interested in a scientific study of women, ancient and modern, occupying full two pages, most interestingly illustrated.

Few realize the part women play in the lives of men and in the life, action and progress of the world.

Woman takes care of man in his childhood, comforts him with her companionship in his years of strength, protects and humors him in old age. Usually he is rather ungrateful.

HER LIFE IS ALL JOY

Both of these women are doing what they can to help the human race. The Italian woman, carrying hay, feeds horses and cows that provide for the family.

The American young woman, swinging the golf club, is building up health that will do something or other remarkable some time. She may be too busy to do it, but her son will do it, or the son of her daughter will do it.

One page of tomorrow's American Weekly is devoted to Einstein, understood by 12 men in the world, and so wise he can give a headache to the other 15,999,999,988 of us.

But YOU might go there some day, sink a well and find oil. Then the Scotch will go back.

The American Weekly has a page about that island.

Tomorrow's American Weekly tells about the strange art of the descendants of King Solomon, and the strange antics of a young colored girl named Josephine Baker, who allowed her pet panther to spring out of a box at the theater onto the head of a flute player in the orchestra.

That's important scientifically. The American Weekly prints a page about that.

In short, everything marvelous, everything scientific, everything to stimulate thought, speculation and interest in life and affairs is in the American Weekly and offered to intelligent readers.

That is why it has nearly 6,000,000 of them, about twice as many as any other publication in the United States.

In an effort to be all things to all men drugstores have now become bookstores.

Books are piled over everything and you have to shovel an aisle in the Carnegie Library to get a pill.

A man goes into the corner pharmaceutical parlor to get a headache powder. He comes out with an armful of books and a week's membership in a circulating education.

Step in and ask for oil of cloves and the clerk sells you a book by Prof. Soregums, "How to Care for the Teeth After It's Too Late."

They have books on every subject. Even the doctors have the morose mania for literary fame and are writing 80,000 word prescriptions.

Ask the drug clerk to take a cinder out of your eye and he immediately goes into executive session, coming out with the first six instalments of a period romance of Elizabethan era.

That's the trouble with civilization. Everybody is writing for the movies. Even President Hoover's last message was a scenario.

You must have seven diplomas to be a druggist. Sometimes that doesn't seem enough.

If they are ever going to straighten out this nation they must start by compelling drugstores to be drugstores again.

Those very essential institutions have squandered their identities in a maze of accessories and by-products.

The drugstores sell books on every subject. And if they haven't got the book they change the subject.

We would like to find an old-fashioned chemist who would really stick to mixing a dangerous prescription. Even if he made a mistake we would know that his heart was in his work and not in a mail order catalogue.

ART AND SCIENCE

By Archibald Henderson

Art has been studied from many different points of view. But it is only within comparatively recent years that mathematicians, physicists and scientists in general are beginning to recognize the esthetic elements in science and to take account of them. Moreover, scientists, and in particular mathematicians, are beginning to perceive that art has a scientific basis, and that it may be possible, certainly for simple forms, to express the esthetic qualities of an art work in mathematical form.

The subject of co-ordinate geometry invented by the French philosopher Descartes, has enabled mathematicians to study in a satisfactory way many of the most beautiful linear and superficial forms which are capable of construction, curves and surfaces of every conceivable variety. It is one thing, however, to set up the equations which enable us to trace these beautiful forms. It is a wholly different thing, and one filled with many elements of uncertainty, to formulate into equations the esthetic principles which constitute, so to speak, the esthetic measure of the art object.

Imagine that you have placed before you a set of regular polygons in a plane, triangle, square, pentagon, hexagon, heptagon, octagon and so on, indefinitely. Or consider the myriad shapes of delicate symmetry and exquisite beauty presented by the snowflake, as seen under the miscroscope. How shall we take account of our esthetic impressions, which perhaps increase with the complexity of the object, and formulate them into esthetic laws?

It is now generally recognized that Poe was making a serious contribution to criticism when he wrote his famous essays, "The Rationale of Verse," and "The Philosophy of Composition." He wrote his poems in accordance with certain esthetic laws, which appear to have their basis in mathematical principles: Order, repetition, symmetry, equality. Poe asks us to examine a crystal. We are at once interested, he says, in the equality between the sides and the angles of one of its faces. Equality of sides pleases us; equality of angles doubles the pleasure. By presenting to view a second face, in every respect like the first, our pleasure is doubled; by presenting a third face, our pleasure is trebled, and so on. In fact, Poe concludes that the pleasure experienced, if it could be measured, would be susceptible of exact mathematical relations — at least, up to a certain point, and beyond that there would be a diminution in the relations considered.

A remarkable study, based on similar ideas, has been carried out by the brilliant mathematical physicist of Harvard, Prof. George Birkhoff. He has made extended studies of certain mathematical figures designed according to certain estalished principles, and in particular of the structural outlines of vases. In lectures and in published papers, he has sought to formulate certain mathematical principles underlying and conditioning some of the simpler art forms. Unity in variety is one of his guiding principles; and he agrees with the definition of the beautiful set forth by Hemsterhuis in the eighteenth century; beauty presents the maximum of ideas in the minimum of time.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Death was coming. He was waiting for it. Could any death be as terrible as this waiting? To die in bed, with the brain drugged by pain, that could not be so bad. Or to die old and broken and sick of life.

But to have to sit here, wide awake .... young and strong and so wide awake that every pore of his flesh seemed a screaming mouth.

To have to sit quietly, in the Chair, while men strapped his hands .... while they slit his trouser leg that the electrodes might burn deeper .... to have to sit watching them making his death ready .... God!

Was it years, or only seconds, before he saw their hands holding the cap above his shaven head? How many deaths did a man die before he was really dead? Or—amazing thought!—was he already dead? Had agony wrenched the life out of him before they could turn on the juice?

Almost he laughed, watching their hands lowering the Cap, thinking what a joke it was that they should put it on a dead man . . . on a man who could no longer suffer.

Then suddenly, while his eyes still stiffened with watching, while his blood still crawled and clotted, he was free. Not from the straps. But from that which had always seemed to keep him bound within himself—from fear and hate and a hunger that clutched and tore—

For a flash he was free from it all . . . forgetting the hate and fear and hunger as he forgot the other straps . . .

And then, clear above the screaming of his flesh, heard his own voice crying, steady and strong—

"GIVE IT TO ME! THIS WILL BE SOME ADVENTURE!"

The hands came down. Presently, after a long struggle and stench, they said he was dead.

That happened in Sing Sing the other day.

Perhaps—but such bravado has made men from clay and gods from men. For that dying convict defied more than the law. He defied his own cowardice. He defied the shackles that bind us all, you and me as well as the man in the Death House. He was weak and vicious—yes. So worthless we thought him only fit to burn. But there was something in him which we could not burn—something that rose triumphant over the frying flesh. Dying, he challenged Death . . . proved once again that man's soul can stand above all happenings . . . cried despite his agony, "Give it to me! This will be some adventure!"

The soul that can say that to Death—or life—goes free.

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS.

There was a fellow at a lawyer's office complaining that he felt awful low. He was one of the lawyer's customers, so the lawyer listened to him.

"Why, Mr. Wise, that ain't nothing but depression," says the lawyer. "I was that way last week. I got the best little old remedy in the world for it. I went right home and pretended I was sick and got my wife all excited about my health, and she petted me and kissed me and put an ice bag on my head and fussed over me, and I felt fine. Just the best kind of treatment for us babies that think we're grown up."

"By golly, you're right, I think," says the customer. "I'll try it. Where can I find your wife this afternoon?"

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS.

Only We Two

Only we two can tell
All the far way
That we together trod
Up to today.

We alone can recall
Our dreams of youth,
Triumphs of toil and trust,
Visions of truth!

We two alone can clasp
Close to our hearts
Memories too sweet to lose
'Till life departs.

So, if the world sometimes
Seems dim and chill,
We have our warmth of love,
Our springtime still.

We have no need of far
Dreams to pursue;
Who can tell all our trust?
Only we two!

THE SCIENCE OF LIFE

By H. G. WELLS

In Collaboration With

III.—The Origin of Life.

But today any of these substances that may be formed are quickly absorbed by the multitudes of living things that everywhere exist, or got rid of by decay, which is our way of saying that they are broken down by bacteria. But before there were any living things to absorb them or break them down, they must have accumulated until as J. B. S. Haldane puts it, "the primeval oceans reached the consistency of hot dilute soup.

H. G. Wells

Any chemical compound which had reached the borderland between dead and living and had acquired the property of chemical self-reproduction would have found in this soupy sea abundant food and stores of potential energy to support it, while it (or rather no doubt one survivor among a host of descendant streams, most of them unsuccessful), evolved into something really alive.

And the other discovery is of things which are in truth on the borderland between dead and alive, the bacteriophages or bacterium-consumers.

These ultra-microscopic units, it will be recollected, are able to grow and multiply so long as they are given a supply of living bacteria to consume. Dead bacteria are, however, no good.

They can be filtered off from the relatively gigantic bacteria and then made to attack other prey, of other kinds if so desired; and the numbers of the bacteriophages increase rapidly (they can be counted by certain ingenious methods) in the process of killing bacteria.

D'Herelle, who discovered them, believes they are alive, because they multiply. Others say they are only an exceptionally active kind of ferment, which happens to be knocking about in the outside world, but is helpless to make more of itself, except out of matter which is truly alive.

The truth may lie between these two views. If living matter has originated from dead, then we shall expect that intermediate conditions should exist. In these bacteriophages we have perhaps discovered a "missing link" between the two states of matter, as in Archaeopteryx we discovered a missing link between two other states of matter, the reptilian and the avian.

If some very recent work is confirmed, it will suggest that these entities may be half-alive parts of cells which have got free of the co-operative restraint of life out into the great world, for it seems that the ultra-microscopic bits into which bacteria are broken up by bacteriophages may occasionally persist and join up again to make full-size bacteria later.

And in any case, as Muller suggests, a bacteriophage is in many ways like a gene (a lethal gene, it is true) got loose.

These are but hints; but they are very encouraging hints. They help confirm our opinion, based on a general weighing of alternatives, that as a matter of history, life on this planet originated from not-life, that it originated at one phase and at one phase only, that it probably originated in the surface waters of the warm early globe, and that sunlight, that "only begetter" of all our terrestrial activities, played a necessary part in its origin.

They also hold out a hope that we shall one day be able to make living matter artificially. But that, if ever it arrive, may be a long time coming. To be impatient with the biochemists because they are not producing artificial microbes is to reveal no small ignorance of the problems involved.

Living matter is matter; but it is quite appallingly complicated matter, many times more complex in its construction than any other substance known anywhere in the universe. It has been evolved through billions of generations under the filtering action of Natural Selection, which has rejected every false try and unsuccessful experiment.

We rightly praise the skill of the chemists who build up dyes and drugs to order, but to build up living matter, substances as complicated as their highest achievements in synthesis would have to be used as the basic bricks.

In any attempt at making living matter, we begin about where the modern organic chemist leaves off, and we begin more than a thousand million years of evolution behind contemporary cells.

THE END.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—Well, sir, if the servants don't up and bow out before dinner the new McIntyre apartment is in ship shape. Our little family knows now all about that domestic perplexity they call the servant problem. They have been coming in 24 hour shifts, every sort, including the Scandinavian.

All we needed was a band for a big parade. Most of them loafed awhile, fattened themselves up and departed, taking along en-passant a few gimcracks like sheets, the master's neckties and a musical cigaret box that tinkled "Alice Blue Gown" when you lifted the lid.

You might have imagined that in all the procession at least two of them would have snapped into a huddle and agreed: "Let's give the saps one good meal." But they never did. One in the caravan was reputed to be a butler like you see in musical comedies—a sort of half man and half wit.

When not buttling he was a desk snatcher. I tried to explain to him there was no future in desk snatching, but a good butler might get somewhere. Yet old pussyfoot continued to sneak upon my desk and snatch old envelopes. The minute I opened a letter and put the envelope down —pss-s-st! it was gone.

Maybe it is unfair to class him as a desk snatcher. After all he may be only an envelope saver somewhat like Frank Fay's aunt, who is a paper bag putter awayer. Anyway there is no place in our menage for a butler. We haven't a long silk rope with a tassel to pull when you want him.

All my life I've wanted, when company comes, to step up suddenly, yank the rope and say: "Meadows, the cocktails!" (Voice: He's a rope yanker!) This piece has suddenly gone nutty, but if you had just acquired servants that seem to fill the bill you'd be twittery, too.

Perhaps it is optimism born of utter despair, but Margaret, from Norway, who cooked it, and Sigrid, from Sweden, who served it, have just provided the tastiest meal I have had in three months. Hooray, says he as his pearl gray hat sailed over New Rochelle.

There are many other things about keeping house I like, too. But I have not yet learned to keep my nervous feet off the electric floor bell—they're all the go! —under the dining room carpet. I do a Swiss bell ringing act at each meal. And after I get the trick of avoiding it down pat I must train myself to quit peeking when a servant answers the front bell. I hear it is very backwoodsey.

* * *

My own hangout in this apartment is in what was originally intended as a dining room. The dining room is now what the blue print calls the "foyer hall." Juggle that one! There is a swinging door with an oval glass leading from my work shop to the butler's pantry, a kitchen out in Gallipolis. The door is handy. The cook can sneak a look now and then and toss the trained seal a fish.

* * *

The dining room is modernistic. O, very utterly! All frameless beveled mirrors and furnishings of chromium and clear plate glass. The table seats only six, but in case of big dinner parties there is always a Child's around the corner.

But the drawing room is the billiards. Through folding doors as I write I can see it. The windows are draped in golden yellow. The ceiling is slightly pebbly with edges of timber showing and the walls are English dark oak paneling fluted at the top with faintly hand painted coats of arms and helmets. There is a ponderous eight-foot high open fire place of grey-white stone, a dull black concert grand piano, a hunting dresser smack from England along a side wall, a seven-foot divan upholstered in dull gold satin, two deep lounging chairs and a huge circular tabaret with a mirrored top. There are two bedrooms, one in blue and the other in pink, and—you'll die at this—what the blue print elegantly calls "a servant's hall."

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Don't talk about your family connections.

If you have had illustrious ancestors you should be a person of much higher standing than you are.

If you have the fine heritage of being well bred you have not lived up to your heritage if you often allude to it.

If you did you would not talk about it, except to those of your own family who are directly interested and personally wishing to discuss it.

If you have failed to maintain the position your family established you are not a credit to your forebears.

With what they handed down to you either in money or in mental equipment if you have not advanced in position and advantages you should be ashamed of the fact.

Every time you allude to your ancestors and what they were in an effort to give yourself a better standing you are admitting your own inferiority.

Why should you make so much of the affluence of your family in the past?
